PREFACE

THE plan of the following work was drafted, in a tentative way, in 1932. At that time the "Commission des listes chronologiques," which had been created a few years earlier by the International Historical Committee, had worked out a scheme and British participation was required. Although, in order to satisfy the needs of the Commission, the British contribution would comprise no more than lists of independent rulers in the Middle Ages, that is to say, part of the first section of this book, an opportunity was given to enlarge its scope for the use of British students in a British publication. A proposal to this effect, first suggested in the course of a discussion at a meeting of the Royal Historical Society on 8 December 1932,<sup>1</sup> was adopted in principle by the Society in 1934. Between June 1934 and June 1936 an informal committee worked out details and invited contributors to undertake particular sections.

The plan of the book, as first drafted in 1932, was sketched by Mr Charles Johnson. It has been followed throughout, but naturally it has, in the course of time, been modified in many particulars. It began as a modest enterprise and has grown into a substantial volume. If we had adopted all the suggestions made to us from time to time, it would have been larger still and its publication would have been indefinitely delayed. It was intended to be a handy and useful contribution to the needs of historical students, not a logical and rounded treatise. Chronology is a vague, ill-defined and intractable field of inquiry, which defies systematic treatment. At the same time we are well aware that, even within the limits which we have imposed upon our work, this book is anything but logical or complete. Some will ask, for example, why the list of dukes, marquesses, and earls should stop at 1603, others why there is no list of Scottish bishops after 1688 or of moderators of the Established Church of Scotland, others why the lists of English officers of state seem so haphazardly chosen. The answer in every case is either considerations of convenience or lack of space. We venture to hope that the book as it stands will be so useful as to call for improvement and enlargement, that, as time goes on, it will grow into a standard work of reference, with its errors and slips removed, its gaps filled, its forms reduced to impeccable uniformity, its usefulness increased by an index.<sup>2</sup> Nothing, in short, would please us better than the knowledge, if only we could possess it, that in fifty years' time the current edition would be hardly recognizable by the editors of this first presentation. Hence we urge readers and critics not to give way to casual exasperation, but, while they recognize such positive merits as the book possesses, to send suggestions and also corrections of detail to the Literary Directors of the Royal Historical Society

As the work proceeded, we became increasingly conscious both of the need of such a book as this and of the surprising unevenness of available knowledge which is one of the reasons for the need. A few contributors have had sufficient knowledge of more or less manageable themes to be able to give to their sections the quality of original work. We may instance the sections on Anglo-Saxon rulers, Welsh and Scottish bishops, parliaments, and saints' days, although their authors would be the last to claim finality for what they and their helpers have done<sup>1</sup>. Other contributors, in spite of considerable original investigation, have had perforce to deal in the main with a mass of traditional learning or with compilations which could be made definitive, if at all, only by the sacrifice of years of labour. As this fact has not been generally recognized, and as some of the unexpected "snags" became apparent only in the course of investigation or even after proofs had begun to come in, we find here an additional reason for publication, for we may now hope that persistent attention will be given to work which has long been overdue. Experts assured us, for example, that, until all the available charter-evidence had been critically sifted, it would be useless to try to revise the available lists of Anglo-Saxon bishops, accordingly, we have made use of the lists in Stubbs's Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum and Searle's Anglo-Saxon Bishops, Kings, and Nobles. Similarly, we should have liked to give more exact dates in the section on Irish bishops and the dates of the election, as well as of consecration or translation, of English bishops, but we found that they would involve minute investigation without satisfactory results. Even in the most trodden paths difficulties and perplexities occasionally occurred, and it is not surprising that the most tiresome section of all turned out to be that on "Officers of State."

It remains to ascribe the sections to their authors and to make other acknowledgments. Professor R. R. Darlington is responsible for the list of rulers from the English settlement to 1066.<sup>2</sup> The list of English rulers from 1066 to 1939 is based on work done by Professor R. F. Treharne, Mr. H. G. Richardson, Professor W. J. Harte, and Dr. M. A. Thomson. Professor Sir J. E. Lloyd contributed the list of Welsh rulers, Mr. E. W. M. Balfour-Melville that of Scottish rulers, Mr. W. Cubbon and Professor Darlington that of rulers of the Isle of Man. The lists of English officers of state were originally undertaken by the late Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, Mr. A. E. Stamp, but he had been able to do little before his death, and most of the existing lists are based upon work done by Dr. F. R. Lewis. They have been through many hands, and we desire to acknowledge especially the help of Mr. L. G. Wickham Legg, who also provided the list of prime ministers, Mr. R. B. Wernham, Mr. E. S. de Beer, Dr. M. A. Thomson, Mr. G. E. Morey, and the present Deputy Keeper and Assistant Keepers of the Public Records. The Deputy Keeper also kindly placed at our service the manuscript list of keepers of the Privy Seal, compiled for the use of the Public Record Office. It is only right, however, to remind our readers that, for reasons already given, these particular lists should still be regarded as provisional, in spite of the labour which has been expended on them. We can only feel some confidence that they are the most reliable lists now available.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The symbols of reference, peculiar to this list, need a word of explanation. Originally, these symbols (A-H) were employed throughout the section on independent rulers, but they were discarded. Professor Darlington's work, however, was already in the second proof. To re-set in paragraphs would have required much extra space and would have been very expensive.

Mr. Herbert Wood compiled the Irish lists of chief governors, deputies, secretaries of state and keepers of the signet or privy seal; and Dr. J. H. Le Patourel the note on the Channel Islands.

The lists of archbishops and bishops of the provinces of Canterbury and York were compiled by Miss Kathleen Major and revised, first by Miss Margaret Deanesly, later by Professor Hamilton Thompson, to whom we are deeply indebted. The introduction was written, to some extent on the basis of material provided by Professor Hamilton Thompson, by the writer of this Preface. Professor William Rees is responsible for the list of Welsh, and Professor R. K. Hannay, Historiographer Royal, for the list of Scottish bishops. The lists of Irish archbishops and bishops were compiled by the Reverend Chancellor J. B. Leslie, and of Catholic archbishops and bishops since the Reformation by the Reverend Myles V. Ronan.<sup>2</sup> The introduction to the first series was compiled by the writer of this Preface, to some extent from material supplied by Chancellor Leslie and Mr. Herbert Wood.

The list of dukes, marquesses, and earls is the work of Mr. R. W. Southern, who had the assistance of the experts mentioned in the note to page 289.

The section on English parliaments was compiled by Mr. H. G. Richardson, and that on provincial and national councils of the Church in England by Mr. C. R. Cheney. The two following sections on reckonings of time and saints' days are the work of Professor Hilda Johnstone, who asks us to add that in the initial planning of the sections she received helpful advice from the Reverend Canon J. E. W. Wallis, while special thanks are due to Mr. Francis Wormald, of the British Museum, for his expert and constant help during the compilation of the list of saints' days. The concluding section on legal chronology is the work of Professor T. F. T. Plucknett.

In the earlier stages of our work we received much help from Professor W. J. Harte, who acted as secretary to the informal committee and undertook the preliminary correspondence with contributors. In addition to their own contributions, Professor Darlington and Mr H G Richardson gave frequent and generous help in revising much of the section on independent rulers. Mr Richardson at our request wrote the long introduction to this section. At various times during the last few years we have also received advice from other scholars, including Mr Charles Johnson, Professor V H Galbraith, Mr. Herbert Wood (one of the contributors); and the Reverend Aubrey Gwynne, S J. But perhaps we owe most of all to the constant and generous help of Dr Hubert Hall, the Literary Director of the Royal Historical Society, and to Mr. C R Cheney, one of his successors in that laborious and most exacting office. They have saved us from many mistakes, and their cheerful encouragement has done much to lighten a task which has often been wearisome and has always been dangerous.

<sup>1</sup> Two points should be mentioned here. The list of chancellors does not give the names of commissioners, and short periods when the seal was in commission are not generally noted. Secondly, in the numeration of the titles of peers in the lists of officers of state, the system adopted in The Complete Peerage is used.

INDEPENDENT RULERS

For the data provided in the lists of rulers the following order has been adopted except in the first section of the first list: parentage (s of, or dau. of), dates of birth, accession and death (b., acc., d.); absences, with notes on regencies; marriages (m) and issue; notes on regnal years and style, and other relevant information. Dates are given according to the new style, unless otherwise stated.

ENGLAND

The following list supplies brief particulars of the parentage, birth, accession, death (or removal), marriage and issue of the sovereigns of England and the United Kingdom. Certain additional information is given: the sovereign's style, and his absences from England which necessitated the appointment of a regent. The facts about rulers before 1066 are set out as follows: (A) date of birth, (B) date of accession, (C) date of death, (D) absences from country, (E) parents, (F) marriage with date, (G) children, (H) notes. The omission of any item indicates that there is nothing to record under this heading or that the information is unobtainable. In the second section these symbols have been discontinued. For the most part, no further explanation is necessary, but it seems desirable to add some explanatory paragraphs, applicable only to section 2, on (a) the royal style, (b) accession, (c) the appointment of regents, and (d) the dating of events.

THE ROYAL STYLE

In the Norman period the sovereign's style can be deduced from the legend on his great seal and from the surviving original charters and writs which issued from his chancery. There may, however, be differences between the style upon the seal and the style generally used for diplomata. The poetical legend on the Conqueror's seal which calls him "Patronus Normannorum" tells us nothing, but with William II begins the use of a terse, straightforward legend which, with some elaboration, has been the model followed by his successors: the legend is "Willielmus dei gracia rex Anglorum." Henry I, after his conquest of Normandy, added on the reverse of his seal "Henricus dei gracia dux Normannorum," although he rarely styled himself more than "rex Anglorum" even in diplomata relating to Normandy. The precedent set by Henry I was followed by his nephew Stephen. Henry II naturally expanded the legend on the reverse of his great seal to "dux Normannorum et Aquitanorum et comes Andegavorum," and incorporated these titles in the style employed in his diplomata. Richard I's usage followed that of his father. John added to the royal style, on the obverse of his seal and also in his diplomata, "dominus Hibernie," a title he had enjoyed before his accession, and substituted "Anglie" for "Anglorum" and so on. The style of later sovereigns reflects political events—for example, the treaty of Paris of 1259, after which Henry III dropped the title of duke of Normandy and count of Anjou; the claim of Edward III to the French throne in 1340 and his temporary renunciation of it after the treaty of Brétigny in 1360, the assumption by Henry V in 1420 of the title of heir and regent of the realm of France in accordance with the treaty of Troyes; the addition of "fidei defensor" to the style of Henry VIII in 1521, which has ever since been retained. The words "dei gracia" were not, as a rule, added to the style of the king in charters and writs until 1172 or 1173, when Henry II commenced a practice which has since been consistently followed. Incidentally, this fact, established by Léopold Delisle, is of very great assistance in determining the data of instruments from Henry II's chancery, which, like those of his predecessors, only very exceptionally include a reference to the year or day of issue.

ACCESSION

Until, apparently, the reign of Edward I, no English king assumed the royal style before his coronation. For example, in the interval between his father's death, on 6 July, and 3 September, when he was crowned, Richard I used the style of "dominus Anglorum et dux Normannorum et Aquitanorum et comes Andegavorum." John, similarly, was called lord of England before his coronation, and, immediately upon Richard's death becoming known in England, John's peace as lord of England and duke of Normandy was proclaimed. Richard and John each dated his regnal years from the day of his coronation, although each had assumed the government as soon as he knew of the death of his predecessor and was certain of the succession. We possess but scanty evidence for previous inter-regna—using the word in its strict sense—although something may be deduced from the actions of the Empress and her son. Consequent upon a ceremony of election at Winchester in April 1141, the Empress called herself "domina Anglorum," but continued to use a personal seal bearing the legend "Mathildis dei gracia Romanorum regina."<sup>1</sup> Both before and after this event the Empress appears to have exercised royal power so far as she could make her writs run. When, however, her son Henry had been put in possession of the duchy of Normandy late in 1150, he began to address writs to ministers and others in England. It appears certain, therefore, that, from at least 1151 onwards, having replaced his mother as claimant to the throne of England, he was exercising such authority as he was able, although it was not until 1153 that he again visited the country. The treaty of Wallingford of November of that year recognized him as heir to the throne, but the only titles he used were those of his continental dominions, and there seems to be no evidence that he assumed the title of lord of England between Stephen's death and his own coronation. His regnal years date from the latter event. It is reasonable to conclude from these facts that in the 12th century, and presumably earlier, coronation was essential to full kingship, although a claimant to the throne immediately endeavoured to exercise royal authority. Nor was there any change in 1216, for, whatever authority may have been exercised in Henry III's name between his father's death on 19 October and his coronation on 28 October, there is no doubt that his regnal years began on the latter date. It is, therefore, correct to equate accession and coronation in the case of all kings from William I to Henry III.

On his father's death, Edward I was far distant and the time of his return uncertain. Special measures were therefore obviously necessary to secure an orderly succession. The conception expressed in the maxim "le roi est mort, vive le roi" had, however, not yet been reached, for there was an interregnum of four days before the new king's peace was proclaimed and his reign was regarded as having begun. By 1307, quite clearly, political theory had made an advance towards the conception that the king never dies, for Edward II's reign was assumed to begin on the day following his father's death and this conception, with some exceptions in times of revolution, has been maintained ever since. The reign of Edward V was assumed to begin on the day of his father's death, and this rule has been invariably observed since the accession of Edward VI.

APPOINTMENT OF REGENTS

The exercise of the royal power in the king's absence was a matter of importance to William I and to all of his successors who held dominions across the seas. The regent might be the queen, the heir to the throne or one or more ministers. Under William I we find his queen acting as regent at different times in Normandy and England, and his sons Robert in Normandy and William in England. William fitz Osbern was left as regent in England in 1067, Odo of Bayeux being associated with him<sup>1</sup>. Lanfranc seems undoubtedly to have acted at other times, notably in 1075, and Odo of Bayeux in 1080: it is possible that there were occasions when the kingdom was committed to two or more ministers, but the evidence appears to be by no means conclusive. It is unlikely that the Conqueror instituted the office of justiciar, as it was understood in the 12th century, and references in chronicles written some generations later are to be discounted. Ranulf Flambard, who is termed by Orderic "summus procurator et iusticiarius," seems unquestionably to have acted as regent for William II; but the evidence which has been believed to show that others shared the regency, with Ranulf appears susceptible of another interpretation.

In the 12th century the volume of evidence, particularly of writs, is considerable, and there can be no doubt as to its interpretation. Queen Matilda acted as regent for Henry I, but, for a large part of the reign, the king was represented in his absence by the justiciar Roger, bishop of Salisbury. Like Ranulf Flambard he is called procurator, and this is a term current from the 11th to the 13th century for a regent or viceroy. Roger continued to serve as justiciar under Stephen, and presumably acted as regent during the king's absence in Normandy in 1137. After Roger's arrest and death in 1139, Stephen seems to have allowed the office to lapse, and, during the king's captivity in 1141, his queen, Matilda, assumed the government on his behalf. It may be noted that, when Henry fitz Empress left England for Normandy about the beginning of April 1154, subsequent to his recognition as heir to the throne, he appears to have appointed Reginald, earl of Cornwall, as his lieutenant<sup>1</sup>.

On his accession, Henry II reconstituted the office of justiciar in England, and writs of Robert, earl of Leicester, Richard de Luci and Ranulf Glanville survive. But, in the early part of the reign, queen Eleanor acted as regent in the king's absence, and, during other absences, the Empress and the young king Henry acted. It may be stated, as a rule, that the justiciar did not act as regent save in the absence of both the king and his crowned associate, whether this was his queen or his son: the Empress's position was clearly exceptional.

Under Richard I and John, the justiciar, or joint justiciars, assumed the regency in the king's absence. It should be noted that Henry II's justiciar, Ranulf Glanville, was not displaced until 16 September 1189, a fortnight after Richard's coronation, that Geoffrey fitz Peter continued in office uninterruptedly from 1198 until his death in 1213, including the period between Richard's death and John's coronation, and that similarly Hubert de Burgh continued in office from June 1215 to July 1232. When Henry III visited France in 1230, Hubert de Burgh accompanied him and Stephen of Segrave replaced the justiciar: he was, however, required to act with the advice of the chancellor. Upon Hubert's fall, Stephen of Segrave was appointed to succeed him, but held office only until April 1234. With the conquest of Normandy by Philip Augustus the office had lost much of its meaning, and the intention was presumably to abolish it. On the next absence of the king in 1242-3 the archbishop of York was regent, and in 1253-4 the queen and the king's brother acted. With the temporary revival of the justiciarship in 1258-65, the ancient usage was restored, except in 1264 when the justiciar, Hugh Despenser, was in opposition to the king and the king's brother acted as regent for a period of six weeks.

The absence of Edward I on his father's death led to the assumption of the regency by the lieutenants whom he had appointed to manage his affairs while on crusade. On other occasions a member of the royal house acted, and it would seem that, during a brief absence in 1279, no formal appointment was made. Edward II's absences were few and short, but it is noticeable that no member of the royal house acted as regent, except on the king's flight to Wales in 1326, when his son was proclaimed keeper of the realm. Thenceforward it became the custom to appoint only members of the royal house as keepers of the realm, and the determination so to confine the exercise of royal power is strikingly illustrated by the practice of Edward III in appointing his infant children, although the effective government clearly resided in the council. Edward VI and his successors to James II were never absent from their dominions. From William III onwards the practice has been for the regency to be exercised, according to the circumstances, either by a member of the royal family or by Lords Justices. The Regency Act, 1937, provides for the appointment of Counsellors of State, being members of the royal family.

DATING

The dating of events, particularly in the Middle Ages, cannot always be a matter of certainty. Where there appears to be room for doubt, this is indicated in the list. In some cases, however, dates are given without query which may, nevertheless, be found to be in conflict with those accepted in standard works of reference: it is impossible to give full bibliographical references in a work of this kind, but it is believed that in all such cases the evidence satisfactorily establishes the date assigned.

Special reference may be made to the dating of periods of absence from this country. The practice of dating instruments issuing from the royal chancery does not begin before the reign of Richard I, and, consequently, the itineraries of his predecessors must be to a great extent conjectural. Richard's itinerary has been constructed from his surviving charters with relative precision, but it is not until the reign of John that the survival of most of the chancery enrolments enables a really full itinerary of the king to be traced, although, even so, there are gaps which must be filled from other evidence, principally from surviving original instruments or copies of them. Already under John we have instances of instruments dated on the same day at places widely separated, and in later reigns such discrepancies are sometimes very marked. Often we can follow the king's movements only in a general way, and cannot be certain to a day or two of the places or neighbourhood in which he stayed<sup>1</sup>. From Henry III's reign onwards there is usually little doubt, however, of the day on which the king crossed the sea and when he returned, and, since these absences alone normally entailed the appointment of a regent, they only, as a rule, are noted in the list. The possibility should not be overlooked that the king's arrival in England might not become immediately known to the regent, who would continue for a day or two to exercise his authority.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

For the descent, marriage and issue of English sovereigns F. Sandford's Genealogical History of Kings and Queens of Great Britain

(1707) is still useful as a comprehensive work. The Dictionary of National Biography and the Complete Peerage between them give the principal facts relating to kings, queens and peers of the blood royal. for the female issue M. A. E. Green's Lives of the Princesses of England (1849-55) supplements them

Two works deal comprehensively with the royal style: T. D. Hardy's Introduction to the Rotuli Chartarum (pp. xii-xxiii: reprinted by Sir Harris Nicholas in his Chronology of History (2nd ed.), pp. 358-79), and A. B. and A. Wyon's The Great Seals of England these must, however, be used with some caution. Most of the available information regarding the title "Domina," "Dominus," is discussed by J. H. Round in Geoffrey de Mandeville, ch. iii: but see also Palgrave, Rotuli Curiae Regis, I, lxxxv-xcvi, II, i-v. For the titles of Henry II before his accession, see Léopold Delisle's Introduction to his Recueil des Actes de Henri II, pp. 120-33

For the itineraries of the earlier kings and the related subject of regency see H. W. C. Davis, Regesta Regum Anglo-Normannorum (William I and William II), W. Farrer, An Outline Itinerary of Henry I; R. W. Eyton, Court, Household and Itinerary of Henry II (conveniently summarized in appendix to L. F. Salzman's Henry II). These are supplemented from the continental standpoint by C. H. Haskins, Norman Institutions, and Delisle, op. cit. L. Landon's Itinerary of Richard I (Pipe Roll Soc.) is on the same lines as the three first-named works. T. D. Hardy's Itinerary of King John, appended to his Introduction to the Rotuli Litterarum Patentium gives dates and places only. this Introduction was also published separately. H. Gough's Itinerary of Edward I is on a similar plan.

KINGS OF KENT.

HENGEST. (B) Uncertain (WM dates reign from landing which, following ASC, he assigns incorrectly to 449, whereas Bede places arrival between 449 and 456, ASC records death of Horsa bro. of Hengest in 455 and states that Hengest and his s. then succeeded to the throne, hence in FW Hengest and Oisc begin to reign in that year) (C) 488. (E) Uictgils s. of Uitta (so Bede followed by FW, but according to SwGen, Uitta s. of Uihthgils). (G) Oeric surnamed Oisc q.v.; (? a dau. first mentioned by Nen, who omits name as does WM, called Rowena, i.e. ? Hrothwyn, by Geoffrey of Monmouth and later writers, m. British k Vortigern—probably mythical).

OERIC SURNAMED OISC. (B) 488. (C) ? 512 (reigned 24 y., ASC). (E) Hengest (so Bede, etc., but SwGen calling him Oese makes him s of Ocgā, i.e. Octa and grandson of Hengest; Nen, par 58, makes Ossa, i.e. Oisc s of Othā). (G) Octa (except in those authorities where order of these two personages is inverted; in these Eormenric is s. of Oisc). (H) Wrongly called Aesc in ASC and FW. From him Kentish ks. derived patronymic Oiscingas.

OCTA (B) ? 512 (see above). (E) Oisc (according to Bede, ASC, FW, WM, but Hengest in SwGen and in Nen, par. 58, and in Nen, par 38, and par. 56, in latter of which he is said to have been k after Hengest). (G) Eormenric (except in those authorities which regard Oisc as Octa's son).

EORMENRIC (C) 560. (E) Octa (Oisc in some authorities, see above). (G) K. Ethelbert q.v.; Rícula m. Sleda father of Saeberht K. of E. Saxons.

ETHELBERT. (A) Unknown (552 according to ASC, F only, but if so he succeeded at age of 8, which is improbable). (B) 560 (so Bede; 565 according to ASC, which must be in error, FW 561). (C) 24 Feb. 616. (E) K. Eormenric. (F) 1. before 597, Bertha dau. of Charibert, Merovingian k at Paris, 2. ? a second wife who survived him and m. Eadbald. (G) K. Eadbald q.v.; Ethelburga m. 625 Edwin K. of Northumbria q.v. (H) First English k. converted to Christianity (597). Third overlord of the Southern English. Issued earliest English code of laws.

EADBALD. (B) 616. (C) 640 (E) Ethelbert (? and Bertha). (F) 1. his father's wid. (presumably not Bertha); 2. Emma dau of a Frankish k (FWGen, WM, not recorded by Bede). (G) K. Earconberht q.v.; Eanswith, a nun (FW), Eormenred regulus m. Oslava (not mentioned by Bede but occurs in ASC, FW, SD, WM), (Egbertus, who attests CS 13, has been regarded as Eadbald's s., but document is spurious).

EARCONBERT. (B) 640. (C) 14 July 664. (E) K. Eadbald (Bede) and Emma (WM). (F) Sexburg, dau. of Anna K. of E. Angles. (G) K. Egbert q.v.; K. Hlothere q.v.; Earcongota, a nun at Faremoutier-en-Brie; Eormengild m. Wulfhere K. of Mercians (FW).

EGBERT I. (B) 664. (C) July 673. (E) K. Earconbert. (G) K. Eadric q.v.; K. Wihtried q.v.

HLOTHERE (B) Summer 673 (C) 6 Feb 685 (E) K. Earconbert. (H) Eadric his nephew q.v., possibly associated with him at some time during the reign (Laws), and Swaebhārd q v, certainly joint k. with him.

EADRIC. (B) 685. (C) (? Aug.) 686 (Bede says he reigned 1 y. and a half, issued diploma, CS 67, in June 686). (E) K. Egbert I. (H) The second surviving Kentish code of laws bears names of Hlothere and Eadric which might suggest that they reigned together but no reference is made to a joint kingship by Bede, and Eadric may have confirmed Hlothere's laws.

SUAEBHARD (Swaefhard). (B) Unknown (reigning 1 March 676, CS 42, presumably joint k. with Hlothere). (C) Unknown—reigning jointly with Wihtred in July 692 (Bede) (E) "Rex Sebbe" (CS 42), presumably Saebbi K. of E. Saxons q v.

OSWINI. Known only from charters Reigning 689 and 690 (CS 73 dated 689, CS 40 undated, CS 35 probably belonging not to 675 but to 690). He was no doubt one of the reges dubni et externi who Bede says held the kingdom after Hlothere's death Date of his accession probably 688, since CS 35 which seems to belong to 17 Jan. 690 was issued in his second y

WIHTRED. (B) Autumn 690 (since Bede states that he reigned  $34\frac{1}{2}$  y), but not sole k. until 692 at earliest (Suaebhard q v reigning jointly with him in this y.). ASC places accession of Wihtred—presumably as sole k—under 694 and his earliest diploma, CS 86, is dated 17 July 694 (C) 23 April 725 (Bede). (E) K. Egbert I. (F) 1. ? Cynegyth (Kingitha), occurs only in Wihtred's diploma of 17 July 694 (CS 86) rejected by Haddan and Stubbs (Councils, iii, 242) but probably genuine; 2. Aedilburg, occurs in CS 90 (March 696), CS 97 (original dated July 697), and CS 96 and 98, 3. ? Werburg, occurs only in Wihtred's privilege (issued between 697 and 716) to the Kentish churches (CS 91) regarded as genuine by Haddan and Stubbs (iii, 238) but of doubtful authenticity. (G) K. Ethelbert II q.v., K. Eadbert q.v.; Alric (Bede mentions these three s. Haddan and Stubbs suggest that Ethelbert and Eadbert were s. of Aethelburh, and Alric the s. of Werburg, but this depends on CS 91 alone) (H) Issued code of laws which has survived ETHELBERT II. (B) 725. Reigned jointly with his bro. Eadbert [Bede's language might suggest that Wihtred's three s. succeeded him as joint ks Ethelbert's earliest diploma is dated 20 Feb 732 (CS 148); he and Eadbert appear as joint ks in April 738 (CS 159); CS 160 is an original diploma of Ethelbert alone belonging probably to 740; and Ethelbert appears as joint k. with Eardwulf q v. in a charter dated 762 in error for 747 (CS 175)] (C) 762 (ASC 760, recte 762; his last known charter, CS 191, is dated 762). (E) K. Wihtred and ? Aedilburg.

EADBERT. (B) probably 725 (assuming that he became joint k. with Ethelbert on death of Wihtred; earliest charter in which they appear as joint ks CS 159, is dated 738, and earliest issued by Eadbert alone, CS 161, belongs to 741, another, CS 173 is dated 747). (C) Uncertain (his death is recorded in ASC sub an. 748, in A, D, and E and sub an. 747 in B and C, ? recte 750, insertion in A states that Ethelbert s. of Wihtred succeeded him, but this is contrary to charter evidence, unless there were two Ethelberts. FW, an 748, follows ASC A but in FWGen Eadbert succeeds Ethelbert though here Eadbert is confused with Eadbert Praen. CS 177, a charter of Ethelbald of Mercia, is attested by Aedbeort K. of Kent and is dated 748 but it appears to be spurious or inflated; CS 189 dated 36th y. of Eadbert's reign and is assigned to ? 761 by Birch; CS 190 a grant of Eadbert dated 25 July 761 in his 36th y. seems to be genuine and if so proves that either the entry in ASC is incorrect or that there were two ks. named Eadbert succeeding one another. Eadbert also attests CS 193, a charter of Sigere dated 762 which seems to be genuine). (E) Wihtred (but in CS 161 K. Eadbert describes himself as cognomento Eating which may be an error, or might suggest that Eadbert who reigned with Ethelbert after Wihtred's death died in 748 or 750 and was not Ethelbert's bro and that the latter did not share the kingdom until in or after 748-50, but this seems to be contrary to Bede's language). (G) probably K. Eardwulf q v.

EARDWULF. Not mentioned by chroniclers; grantor of CS 175, dated 762, which Birch corrects to 747, of CS 176 which Birch assigns to c. 747, and of CS 199 an original assigned by Birch to c. 765. In this last he speaks of Eadbert his father who may be K. Eadbert, and if so he would appear to have reigned jointly with his father and his uncle Ethelbert II.

SIGERED. Not mentioned by chroniclers among the ks. of Kent; grantor of CS 193 dated 762 and attested by K. Eadbert, and of CS 194 (issued apparently between 759 and 765) where he describes himself as "rex dimidiaie partis provinciae Cantuariorum." Joint k. with Eadbert and ? Eardwulf Cannot be identified with Sigere K. of E. Saxons.

EANMUND. Confirms Sigere's grant, CS 194; ? identical with K. Ealhmund.

HEABERHT. Attests as rex charter of Offa of Mercia dated 764 (CS 195, possibly genuine) and as rex Cant' confirms charter of Egbert II K. of Kent dated 765 (CS 196); witnesses grant of Egbert II, CS 260, assigned to 765-91.

EGBERT II. Reigned c. 765-c. 780 or later. Grantor of CS 196 dated 765, CS 227 (original) dated 778, CS 228 dated 779, CS 260 (765-91) and mentioned as having been dependent of Offa of Mercia in CS 293, original dated 799, by which date he was dead.

[ALRIC. Possibly joint k. with his bros. Ethelbert and Eadbert from c. 725 but cannot have reigned in late 8th century as supposed by WM, who regards the three bros. as successively sole k assigning to Eadbert a reign of 23 y (i.e. 725-48) to Ethelbert 11 y. (presumably 748-60) and Alric 34 y. (presumably 760-94). The chronology is certainly impossible]

EALHMUND. (B) Unknown—reigning 784 (CS 243, which seems to be abbreviation of genuine charter) and 786 (ASC sub an. 784 F.) (E) Uncertain. (Identified in ASC an. 784 (insertion in F only), with Ealhmund father of Egbert K. of W. Saxons; if so his father was Eafa, but identification probably false) (G) ? Egbert K. of W. Saxons—see above. (H) ? identical with K. Eanmund above.

EADBERT (Praen). (B) 796 (ASC 794). (C) Unknown, deposed by Cenwulf K of Mercia 798. (H) This brief reign represents an unsuccessful attempt of the Kentishmen to end Mercian rule over the kingdom. Most if not all of the Kentish ks. reigning after Wihtred were the dependents of Ethelbald and Offa ks. of Mercia. SD states that Cenwulf himself assumed kingship of Kent, and he is found disposing (as Offa had done) of properties in Kent without reference to a local k. Cuthred and Baldred below were clearly creatures of the Mercian ks. Cenwulf in CS 370 (original of 822) uses style "rex Merciorum vel etiam Contwariorum" and in CS 373 (original of 823) "rex Merciorum seu etiam Cantwariorum."

CUTHRED. (B) 798 (that Aug. 805 fell in Cuthred's 8th y. is stated in original charter CS 322 which proves accession belongs to 798; Cuthred stated by WM to have reigned 8 y. and in FWGen to have died in 9th y. of reign). (C) 807 (ASC 805, recte 807, all except C, 804 C) (E) Cuthbert, member of Mercian royal house (Cuthred is described as bro. of Cenwulf K of Mercia in CS 303 dated 801 and in CS 317 dated 804, both of which appear to be genuine, though not in CS 321 original dated 805, CS 318 contemporary charter, or CS 322 original, dated 805; the relationship is not mentioned by any chronicler). (G) Cenwald (attests CS 1336, dated 805).

BALDRED, of whom nothing is known save that he was expelled from Kent by Egbert K of W. Saxons in 825 (ASC 823); coins of his have survived but no charters

Note After the W. Saxon conquest of 825 Kent together with Essex and Sussex normally formed in the 9th century an appanage for the heir to W Saxon throne. The W. Saxon rulers are omitted here (see ks. of Wessex), but the arrangement should not obscure the fact that the greater number of the 8th-century ks. above, being dependents of the Mercian ks., enjoyed little, or no more independence than the 9th-century ks. of W Saxon origin.

KINGS OF DEIRA

AELLI. (B) 559 (ASC C and F, FW) or 560 (SDGen, ASC A, B, E). Whitby Life of Gregory the Great proves that Aelli was reigning at least as early as 574-8. (C) 588 (ASC, FW) or 590 (reigned 30 y. ASC, SDGen). (E) Yffi. (G) K. Edwin q.v.; Acham. K. Ethelfrith q.v., s. or dau. who was parent of Hereric, father of Hild, abbess of Whitby. (H) Called Ulli by Nen. Mentioned by Bede in connection with Gregory the Great and Anglian boys.

(DEIRA united with Bernicia c. 592 or earlier to 616.)

EDWIN. (A) 584 (48 in 632, Bede). (B) 616 (so FW; 617 in SDGen and ASC; but Bede states that 627 was his 11th y. and that he had reigned 17 y. in 632, which indicates accession in summer of 616). He may have reigned for a short time between death of Aelli and his expulsion by ? Ethelfrith. (C) 12 Oct. 632 (E) K Aelli. (F) 1. Cwenburg dau. of Cearl K. of Mercians (so Bede, FWGen calls her father Creoda K. of Mercians), 2. 625, Ethelberg called Tata dau. of Ethelbert K. of Kent. (G) by 1. Osfrid b. before 616, d. 632; Eadfrid b. before 616, d. 632; by 2. Eanfled b. 626, m. K. Oswiu q.v.; Ethelhun d. before 632; Ethelthryth d. before 632; Wuscfrea (taken to Gaul with Yffi s. of Osfrid c. 634—Nen's statement that none of Edwin's race survived Hatfield is untrue). (H) Ruled both Deira and Bernicia. Fifth overlord of the Southern English. First Christian k. of Northumbria (baptized Easter 627).

OSRIC. (B) Late 632. (C) Summer 633. (E) Aelfric paternal uncle of K. Edwin (i.e. bro. of K. Aelli). (G) K. Oswine q.v.

(OSWALD united Bernicia and Deira 633-41.)

OSWINE. (B) 644 (from Bede, 645 FW; 643 ASC). (C) 20 Aug. 651. (E) OSRIC.

ETHELWALD. (B) 651 (FW). (C) In or after Nov. 654 (probably lost kingdom through failure to support Oswiu at the Winwaed). (E) K. Oswald. (H) Probably last independent k. of Deira. Oswiu annexed Deira after victory over Penda in 654 and later reges in Deira are sub-kings

KINGS OF BERNICIA

IDA. (B) 547. (C) 559 (ASC F; reigned 12 y. Sw., SDGen, FWGen, Nen, 11 y. SD, par. 12) or 560 (ASC A & E). (E) Eoppa (SD, FW, SwGen, ASC) Eobba, Eubba (Nen) (F) Bearnoch (assuming that "et unam reginam Bearnoch" of Nen, par. 57, is error for "ex una regina," but author may mean that Q Bearnoch was dau. of Ida). (G) By his q. (? Bearnoch)—Adda, Ethelric, Teoderic, Ethric, Teuthere, Osmaer (according to SDGen but s. ex reginis in FWGen and an. 547 are Adda, Baelric, Theodric, Ethelric, Osmaer, and Theodhere, while Nen, par. 57, records that he had 12 sons—Adda, Aeldric, Decdric, Edric, Deothere, Osmer et unam reginam Bearnoch); by his concubine (SDGen) or concubines (FWGen)—Ogg (SD, Occa FW), Alric (SD and FW), Ecca (SD and FW), Osbald (SD, Oswald FW), Scor (SD, Sogor FW), Sceotheri (SD, Sogothere FW). Of the latter group of 6, Ealric only occurs in Nen, par. 57, Deoric (? Theodoric) in Nen, par. 63, Ethelric, Ocg and Edric occur in SwGen. (H) SD and Nen say that he ruled all Northumbria but this is evidently a mistake.

The order and regnal years of the kings reigning between the death of Ida and the accession of Ethelfrith, as given by the earliest authorities, differ so widely that it has been thought advisable to set them out thus.

Sw, p. 148 (list of c. 737). Glappa 1 y. (559-60), Adda 8 y. (560-8), Aedilric 4 y. (568-72), Theodric 7 y. (572-9), Friduuald 6 y. (579-85), Husa 7 y. (585-92).

SD, Hist. Reg., par. 12. Glappa 1 y., Adda 8 y., Ethelric 7 y., Theoderic 4 y., Frithuwold 7 y., Hussus 7 y.

SDGen. Adda (son of Ida) 8 y (559-67), Glappa 1 y. (567-8), Hussa 7 y. (568-75), Frithewlf 7 y. (575-82), Theoderic 7 y. (582-9), Eathelric 4 y. (589-93).

FWGen. Adda (s. of Ida) 7 y, Clappa 1 y., Theodwlf 1 y., Freothulf 7 y., Theodoric 7 y, Ethelric (d. 593 FW sub an) 2 y, in Bernicia only, 5 y. in Bernicia and Deira after expelling Edwin.

Nen, par. 63. Adda (s. of Ida) 8 y., Aedric (s. of Adda) 4 y., Deoric (s. of Ida) 7 y., Friodolguald 6 y. (reigning 597), Hussa 7 y., ? and Deodric.

None of the above ks. is mentioned by Bede who seems to attribute Edwin's expulsion from Deira to K. Ethelfrith. FW's statement that he was expelled by K. Ethelric who united the kingdoms for 5 y. is doubtful. In ASC 593 (E only) and SwGen Ethelric is stated to be s. of Ida.

ETHELFRITH. (B) 592 or 593 (593 in ASC and FW and implied by SDGen; Bede terms 603 Ethelfrith's 11th y.). (C) 616 (E) K. Ethelric (ASC E; and SwGen, Ealdric in Nen, par. 57). (F) 1. Bebbā or Bebbab (SDGen implies that there were two wives but leaves first unnamed, Nen, par. 63, gives Bebbab as name of one w.; Bede mentions Northumbrian q. named Bebbā without stating whose w. she was) 2. Acha dau. of K. Aell, ? a third w. unnamed. (G) K. Eanfrid q.v. (son of Acha according to FWGen but SDGen makes him s. of unnamed first w.); by 2. K. Oswald q.v., K. Oswiu q.v.; Oslac; Oswudu, Osaf (Oslaf); Offa—the foregoing is the order in SDGen with which that in ASC 617 E is identical, as also is Nen, par. 57, with Osguid as error for Oslac, but order in FW is Oslaf, Oslac, Oswald, Oswiu, Offa, Oswudu, ? by 3. St. Ebba, abbess of Coldingham (so FWGen but Bede calls her uterna soror of K. Oswiu which suggests that she was dau. of Acha by another husband). In life of St. Oswald by Reginald of Durham (SD, ii, 340), Eanfrid and Oswald are sons of Acha and the other five sons of concubines. (H) Expelled Edwin and united Deira to Bernicia.

(EDWIN K. of Deira, ruled both Bernicia and Deira 616-32.)

EANFRID (B) late 632 (Bede, ASC wrongly 634). (C) 633. (E) K. Ethelfrith (F) ? Member of the Pictish royal house. (G) ? Tolargan K. of the Picts, d. 657

OSWALD (SAINT). (A) 604. (B) 633. (C) 5 Aug. 641. (E) K. Ethelfrith and Acha. (F) dau. of Cynegils K. of W. Saxons (called Cyneburg in 12th-century life of Oswald by Reginald of Durham) (G) K. Ethelwald of Deira q.v. (H) Sixth overlord of the Southern English. Nen calls him "Lamnguin."

OSWIU. (A) 612 (d. in 58th y. Bede). (B) Late in 641 (10 Oct 643 fell in his 2nd y.). (C) 15 Feb 670. (E) K. Ethelfrith and ? Acha (F) 1. Riemmelth dau. of Royth, s. of Rum (Nen, par. 57), 2. Eanfled dau. of K. Edwin and Ethelberg (G) Alchfrid sub-k. in Deira c. 654-64 (probably not s. of Eanfled), 2. probably children of Eanfled. Alchfled m. (c. 653) Peada s. of Penda K. of Mercians;

K. Egrith q.v. (possibly sub-k. in Deira c. 664-70); Aelfwine b. c. 661 (probably sub-k. in Deira from some date after 664 to 679, called rex by Bede), d. 679, Ostthryth m. c. 679 Ethelred K. of Mercians, d. 697, K. Aldfrid q.v. (cannot be identical with Alchfrid above); Aelfed b. 653 or 654, nun, d. 713 or 714. (H) United Bernicia and Deira 654-70. Seventh overlord of the Southern English, i.e. 654-7 during which period he annexed Mercia to Northumbria. Appears to have subjugated Britons of Strathclyde, Scots of Dalriada and a considerable part of the Picts (Skene, preface to Chronicles of the Picts and Scots).

KINGS OF NORTHUMBRIA

ETHELFRITH c. 592 to 616 (see Bernicia).

EDWIN 616 to 632 (see Deira).

OSWALD 633 to 641 (see Bernicia)

OSWIU 654 to 670 (see Bernicia).

EGFRITH (A) 645 (40 y. old at death, Bede). (B) Feb. 670. (C) 20 May 685. (E) K. Oswiu and Eanfled. (F) 1. 660 (FW only) Ethelthryth dau. of Anna K. of E. Angles (Bede), separated after being Egrith's consort for 12 y., d. 679 (or less probably 680), 2 (before 678) Iurminburg (Eormenburg).

ALDFRID. (B) May 685. (C) 14 Dec. 704 (Bede dates his death 705 "anno regni sui xx<sup>o</sup> necdum impleto" indicating that the event occurred between September 704 and May 705; the day and month are given in ASC D & E and FW an 705). (E) K. Oswiu and ? Eanfled (possibly, though Bede once calls him illegitimate and according to Irish authorities his mother was Fina—see Plummer's Bede II, 263). (F) Cuthburh sis. of Ine K. of W. Saxons (ASC an. 718, FW an. 718, WM). (G) K. Osred I q.v.; ? K. Osric q.v.

OSRED I. (A) 696 or 697 (about 8 when succeeded, Bede). (B) Dec. 704 or early 705. (C) 716. (E) K. Aldfrid.

COENRED. (B) 716. (C) 718. (E) Cuthwine (probably, but see K. Ceolwulf his bro. below).

OSRIC. (B) 718 (reigned 11 y. Bede). (C) 9 May 729. (E) Probably K. Aldfrid (see Plummer's Bede, II, 337).

CEOLWULF. (B) 729 (C) 764 (SD) or 760 (ASC D and E). Deposed and restored 731. Resigned 737 (Cont. Bed., SD, ASC) or 738 (FW). (E) Cuthwine (SwGen) or Cutha s. of Cuthwine (ASC 731, FW 729, SDGen). (H) Bede dedicated his Historia Ecclesiastica to this k

OSWULF. (B) 758 (Cont Bed., SD) or 757 (FW, ASC) (C) 758 (or less probably 757), 24 or 25 July. His death is dated 760 in SD, Hist. Dun. Eccles. ii, 4. (E) K. Eadbert. (G) K. Elfwald, q v

ETHELWALD MOLL. (B) 5 Aug. 758 (Cont Bed) or 759 (SD, FW, ASC) (C) Unknown, driven out 30 Oct. 765 SD. (F) 1 Nov. 762, Ethelthryth (SD). (G) K. Ethelred I q v.

ALCHRED (B) 765 (C) Unknown (exiled 774). (E) Eanwine (SwGen, FWGen) (F) 768 Osgearn (SD). (G) K. Osred II q v, Alchmund dux (d 800 SD, FW).

ETHELRED I ("qui et Ethelberht," FW, probably error). (B) 774 (SD, FW, ASC). (C) 18 April 796 (so SD, 19 April 794 (i.e. 796) ASC; 29 April 794 (i.e. 796) F.W) Exiled 779 (SD) or 778 (FW, ASC). Restored 790 (SD, FW, ASC). (E) K. Ethelwald Moll. (F) 1. Unnamed, 2. 29 Sept 792, Aelfled dau. of Offa K. of Mercians.

ELFWALD I. (B) 779 (or 778; earlier date is supported by SD, Hist. Dun. Eccles., ii, 4, where 780 is termed his 3rd y.). (E) K. Oswulf. (G) Oelf and Oelfwine murdered 791 (SD).

OSRED II. (B) 788 (or 789). (C) 14 Sept. 792. Expelled 790. (E) K. Alchred Osred is also described as nepos of K. Elfwald (SD, FW, ASC). (H) K. Ethelred restored 790-6

OSBALD secured crown 796 and expelled same y after reign of 27 days; d 799 (SD).

EARDWULF (B) 796 (SD, but according to ASC 14 May 795), crowned 26 May 796. (C) Unknown Expelled 806 (ASC, which agrees with SDGen, where Eardwulf's reign is reckoned as 10 y., reigned 12 y according to HH, ed. Arnold, p 136). Said to have been restored 808 by intervention of Emperor Charles and Pope Leo (Einhard, cited by Haddan and Stubbs, Councils, iii, 561) but English sources suggest that restoration if effected was very brief. (E) Eardwulf (SD) (G) K. Eanred q v

ELFWALD II. (B) 806. (C) 808 (? 807, reigned 2 y SDGen).

EANRED. (B) 808 (? 807, SD, Hist. Dun. Eccles., ii, 5) (C) 841 (? 840, reigned 33 y., SD, or 32 y., SDGen). (E) K. Eardwulf. (G) K. Ethelred II q v.

ETHELRED II. (B) 841 (? 840). (C) Reigned 9 y. according to SDGen, which suggests 849 or 850 was y. of death, but this event is ascribed to 848 by Matthew Paris, who alone mentions expulsion by Redwulf in 844 and restoration in same y. (E) K. Eanred.

REDWULF. King in 844 (part of y). Mentioned only by Matt. Paris, but his statement is borne out by existence of coins of Redulf Rex (Catalogue of Coins in B M, A.-S. series, i, 184-6).

OSBERT. (B) 849 or 850 (854 was his 5th y., SD, 1, 53, which proves that he cannot have succeeded in 848). (C) 21 March 867. Expelled 862 or 863 (reigned 13 y. SDGen).

ÆLLE (B) 862 or 863. (C) 21 March 867. (E) Hama (murdered by Ragnar Lothbrok) according to Saxo Grammaticus. Ælle is said to have been bro. of K. Osbert (SD, Hist. de Sancto Cuthberto par. 10) but according to ASC, SDGen and Series Regum Northymbrensum (SD ed. Arnold ii, 391) he was not of royal blood.

EGBERT I. (B) 867, set up by Danes as puppet k. and given rule over region n. of Tyne (SD). (C) 873 (according to SD, Hist. Reg., an. 873, in which work, sub an. 867, length of reign is given as 6 y. In SDGen reign given as 5 y. and Hist. Dun. Eccles. records expulsion, which event appears to be contemporary with d. of Edmund of E. Anglia, i.e. 870).

RICSIG. (B) 873 (SD, Hist. Reg.). (C) 876 (SD, Hist. Reg.—an. 876 and an. 873 where said to have reigned 3 y.; SDGen gives reign of 2 y.) (F) ? Edred filius Rixinci (SD, Hist. de Sancto Cuthberto, par. 24, records that Edred "filius Rixinci" killed princeps Eardulfus whom Arnold identified with Eadwulf mentioned below; identity of this Edred's father uncertain). (H) probably ruled n. of Tyne.

EGBERT II. (B) 876 (SD). (C) ? 878 (SDGen gives reign of 2 y., which would suggest that author reckoned reign as 874-6). (H) Ruled region n. of Tyne (SD, Hist. Reg.). Last recorded k. of English kingdom of Northumbria. The true successors of Egbert I, Ricsig, and Egbert II, two of whom certainly and probably the third also, ruled only the region n. of the Tyne, appear to be not the Scandinavian ks. at York (last years of Egbert II seem to overlap part of Halfdan's reign) but the Englishmen Eadwulf ("beloved by Alfred," K. of Wessex) and his s. Ealdred, who acknowledged the suzerainty of Edward the Elder and was expelled by Ragnald (SD, Hist. de Sancto Cuthberto, par. 22), these men though not described as reges appear to have been independent rulers. For the rulers of the Scandinavian kingdom of York see below. After recording the expulsion of the last of these, SD (Hist. Reg., an. 952) wrote "defecerunt hic reges Northanhymbrorum; et deinceps ipsa provincia administrata est per comites."

KINGS OF MERCIA

The earliest k. of the Mercians mentioned by Bede is Cearl, whose dau. Quenburg m. Edwin K. of Northumbria when he was in exile in Mercia (before 616). Cearl therefore was reigning in the early 7th century and probably in the late 6th. In the genealogies, Penda, whose relationship to Cearl is uncertain, is the s. of Pybba and the grandson of Creoda whose ancestry is traced through Offa and Wermund to Woden. FW (Thorpe, i. 266) once calls Pybba rex, but begins his regnal list with Penda, as does WM. Creoda (Crida) was the first k. of the Mercians according to HH, who states that Pybba (Wippa) his s. succeeded him (reigning 597) and was himself succeeded by his kinsman Cearl. Roger of Wendover and later writers assign the foundation of the Mercian kingdom and the beginning of the reign of Creoda (whom they regard as its first k.) to 585. FW (i. 268) by describing Quenburg as the dau. of Creoda confuses the latter with Cearl. It remains uncertain whether Pybba or Creoda was k of the Mercians.

PENDA. (A) ? 576 (Stated to have been 50 y. of age at accession assigned to 626 in ASC but Bede, ii, 20, uses language which suggests that he was not k. when he assisted Caedwalla in the war against Edwin in 632, praebente illi Penda viro strenuissimo de regio genere Merciorum. If Penda was 50 in 632 his birth would fall in 582.) (B) ? 626 (ASC, but see above, Bede's language may suggest that he became k. late in 632). (C) 15 Nov. 654. (E) Pybba. (F) Cyneuse. (G) Peada made princeps of the Middle Angles by Penda, m. Alchfled dau. of Oswiu K. of Bernicia, converted to Christianity and the Middle Angles with him 653, held kingdom of S Mercians under Oswiu 654-6, murdered April 656, ? the k. who issued sceattas inscribed PADA; K. Wulfhere q.v.; K. Ethelred q.v., Cyniburg m. Alchfrid s. of Oswiu K. of Northumbria, Cyneswith, nun, (FW, WM, not named by Bede), ? Oswald (Oswald bro. of K. Ethelred occurs in CS 130 which may be based upon a genuine statement of Bishop Egwin concerning gifts which he had received); Merewald "rex Westan-Hecanorum" and Mercelm are regarded as s. of Penda by FW and WM but not mentioned by Bede and tradition is improbable. (H) Last heathen k. of Mercians. Not accounted overlord of the S. English, but Bede records successful wars against W. Saxons, E. Angles and Northumbrians. After his overthrow in 654 there was no k. of Mercia for 3 y, Oswiu of Northumbria ruling the kingdom 654-7. Nen calls Penda's bro. Eowa (killed 641) "rex Merciorum"; he may have been a sub-k. under Penda.

WULFHERE (B) 657. (C) 674. (E) Penda (F) Eormengild dau. of Earconbert K. of Kent and Sexburg (FW, WM, not recorded by Bede). (G) K. Coenred q.v.; St. Werburg (FW, WM); ? Berhtwald described by Eddius as s. of K. Ethelred's bro., WM alone calls him s. of Wulfhere (Berhtwald was probably a subregulus under Ethelred, Eddius calls him praefectus and CS 65 dated 683 purports to be a grant of Berhtwald rex but though it is possibly based on ancient material it is in its present form of doubtful authenticity).

ETHELRED. (B) 674. (C) 716 (FW); abdicated 704 (Bede). (E) Penda. (F) Osthryth (murdered 697) dau. of Oswiu K. of Northumbria (Bede). (G) K. Ceolred q.v. (H) Accession of Coenred recorded, sub an. 704, in all MSS of ASC but D, E, and F. also state that he succeeded to the kingdom of the Southumbrians in 702—probably a doublet since no other evidence that Coenred was associated with Ethelred before latter's abdication.

COENRED. (B) 704. (C) c. 709; abdicated and went to Rome in 709 (Bede; FW assigns event to 708). (E) Wulfhere and Eormengild.

CEOLRED. (B) 709. (C) 716 (Bede). (E) K. Ethelred and Osthryth (F) Werburh (d. 782 ASC D, E, 781 FW, 783 SD who says she was an abbess at time of her death).

ÆTHELBALD. (B) 716. (C) 757 (Cont. Bed., murdered "a suis tutoribus"; death recorded under 755 in ASC and Ethelwerd and 756 FW) (E) Alwih s. of Penda's bro Eowa (SwGen, ASC, FW). (H) Overlord of the Southern English.

BEORNRED, of unknown origin, established himself as k. 757 after murder of Ethelbald but killed in same year by Offa (Cont. Bed.).

OFFA (B) 757 (C) July 796 (26 July according to SD, 29 July according to ASC. The event is entered under 794 in all MSS. of ASC the annals of which are here incorrectly dated by 2 y.; entered again under 796 in D and E; assigned correctly to 796 in ASN and SD). (E) Thincfrith great-grandson of Eowa, Penda's bro. (SwGen, ASC, FW, Nen calls Thincfrith Dumunfert). (F) Cynethryth (FW, charters and coins). (G) K Egrfrith q.v. crowned K. of Mercians 787 (ASC, an. 785, styled rex Merciorum in charters); Eadburh m. 789 Beorhtric K. of Wessex (ASN); Aelfled m. 29 Sept. 792 Ethelred K. of Northumbria (SD, ASC, D and E); Aelfthryth a virgin (FWGen); (? Aethelburh, abbess—In Offa's grant to Chertsey, CS 251, dated 787, reference is made to his daughters namely, Ethelburga abbatisa, Aethelfleda, i.e. ? Aelfled, Edburga, i.e. Eadburh, and Aethelswitha written in MS. Aethelfthithe, this last is probably a corruption of Aelfthryth, if not she must be a dau. who is otherwise unknown. Haddan and Stubbs, Councils, III, 642–3, mark this document "questionable" but not without hesitation and it may possibly be genuine.) (H) Overlord of the Southern English; employs regnal style "rex totius Anglorum patriae", probably originator of penny coinage.

EGFRITH (B) July 796 (C) 14 or 17 Dec. 796 (reigned 141 days, ASC an. 755, ASN, FW, exact date of Offa's death uncertain, see above). (E) K. Offa and Cynethryth

COENWULF. (B) Dec 796 (C) 821 (ASC an. 819, i.e. 821 in all MSS. except F which records event, sub an. 822, Ethelwerd and FW, sub an. 819, d. in 24th y. of reign FWGen). (E) Cuthbert descendant of Pybba, Penda's father (SwGen, FWGen). (F) Aelfthryth (FWGen and charters), in a diploma, spurious or inflated, dated 799 CS 296 Coenwulf speaks of his wife Cenegitha. (G) Gwenthryth (FWGen and CS 339 dated 811, nearly contemporary text); Burgenhild (FWGen), Cenelm (b. 814 and murdered 821 by his sis. Cwenthryth according to FW sub an. 819, who appears to assign to Kenelm a reign of a few months but this is improbable.)

CEOLWULF I (B) 821 (C) Unknown; expelled 823 (ASC 821, Ethelwerd and FW). (E) Cuthbert, descendant of Pybba (Ceolwulf was pater of Cenelm and therefore bro. of Coenwulf according to FWGen) (G) Aelfled m. Wigmund s. of Wiglaf K. of Mercia q.v.

BEORNWULF. (B) 823. (C) 825 (ASN 825, other chronicles 823). (H) defeated by Egbert K. of Wessex at Ellandun 825 and killed by E. Angles later in same year.

LUDECAN (B) 825. (C) 827 (ASN).

WIGLAF. (B) 827. (C) 840 (reigned 13 y., death recorded sub an 838 FW) (F) Cynethryth (FWGen and charters) (G) Wigmund m Aelfied dau of K. Ceolwulf supra (parents of St Wistan murdered 850, FW) (H) Seems to have been expelled when Egbert conquered Mercia 829, restored 830 (ASC sub an. 828. and coins)

BEORHTWULF (B) 840. (C) 852 (d in 13th y of reign FW; driven out after reign of 13 y. WM). (F) Saethryth (FW and charters). (G) Beorhtfrith (FW); Beorhtric (CS 428, 450).

BURGRED (B) 852. (C) Unknown, driven out by Danes in 874 in 22nd y of reign and went to Rome where he d. (ASC 874, except C 875; Ethelwerd, FW and Asser 874). (F) 853 Aethels-with dau. of Ethelwulf K of W. Saxons (ASC 853 A, D and E, 854 B and C, Asser and FW 853), d on way to Rome and buried at Pavia 888 or 889 (ASC 888 in all MSS. except C 889, FW 889).

CEOLWULF II (B) 874 (puppet k. set up by Danes who in 877 settled eastern Mercia leaving western Mercia to Ceolwulf). (C) Unknown, probably ceased to be k before 886 when Alfred K. of W Saxons appears to have been acknowledged by all the English not under Danish rule. (E) Unknown, described as insipiens minister (thegn) of Burgred (H) Last recorded k of Mercians, English Mercia hereafter usually ruled by ealdorman under W Saxon k.

KINGS OF LINDSEY

Though there is no reference to a line of ks. ruling Lindsey in the writings of Bede and other historians, the genealogy of the ks of Lindsey who traced their descent from Woden has been preserved in SwGen (9th century) and FW. It has been shown that Aldfrith with whom the genealogy terminates is probably identical with Ealdfrith rex who between 786 and 796 attested Offa's confirmation of a grant by Aldwulf dux Suth Saxonum, CS 262 (F. M. Stenton, Ks. of Lindsey in Essays Presented to R. L. Poole). The ancestors of Aldfrith can be dated roughly but it is not known whether any of them were rulers of Lindsey, which kingdom was normally subject to either Mercia or Northumbria.

(Aldfrith's genealogy. Aldfrith (Ealdfrith) s of Eatta, Eatta s. of Eanferth, Eanferth s. of Biscop, Biscop s of Beda, Beda s. of Bubba, Bubba s of Caedbaed, Caedbaed s of Cueldgils (Queldgils), Cueldgils s. of Cretta, Cretta s of Uinta (Winta), Uinta s. of Woden.)

KINGS OF THE EAST ANGLES

The first E. Anglian k mentioned by Bede is Redwald. FWGen and SDGen begin with him and WM regards him as first k. Bede states that Redwald was the s. of Tytili and he the s. of Uuffa from whom the E Anglian royal house were called Uuffingas. Roger of Wendover reckons Tytili and Uuffa as ks, assigning the accession of Wuffa to 571 and that of Tytili to 578, but the origin of these annals is unknown. In the 9th-century genealogy of K. Alfwald (SwGen) Tyttla is the s. of Wuffa whose father Wehha and other ancestors are given. In Nen, par. 59, they appear as Tytil s. of Guffa s. of Guecha, and Guecha (i.e. Wehha) is here described as first E. Anglian k. It is possible that Tytili and Wuffa and even Wehha were rulers of E. Anglia, for the English settlement here certainly belongs to a very early date.

REDWALD. (B) Unknown—late 6th century. (C) Unknown (in or after 616; language of Bede might suggest that he did not long survive victory over Bernicians). (E) Tyttla s. of Wuffa (G) Raegenheri d. 616, K. Earpwald q.v. (H) Fourth overlord of the Southern English (Bede). Converted to Christianity in Kent but on return to E. Anglia reverted to heathenism without wholly abandoning Christian faith.

EARPWALD. (B) Unknown, ? 616. (C) 627 or 628 (FW's date 632 conflicts with data in Bede). (E) K. Redwald. (H) Converted to Christianity 627 or 628 (date 632 in ASC and FW conflicts with Bede's statements concerning Bishop Felix and his successors).

SIGEBERHT. (B) 630 or 631. (C) Unknown. Abdicated and retired to monastery, subsequently resumed secular life to assist K. Ecgric against Penda of the Mercians, and was killed in battle of uncertain date. (E) Unknown—he was half-brother of K. Earpwald (same mother). (H) Reintroduced Christianity after E. Anglia had relapsed into heathenism for 3 y., during which period there may have been a heathen k. whose name is unrecorded.

ECGRIC. (C) Killed fighting against Penda of the Mercians at uncertain date. (E) Unknown (he is described as kinsman of Sigebert). (H) Joint-k. or sub-k. during part or whole of reign of Sigebert (Bede).

ANNA. (B) Uncertain. In the Liber Eliensis the deaths of Sigebert and Ecgric and the accession of Anna are assigned to 637 (p. 14) but the accession of Anna is also dated 634-5 in this work (p. 23 where Anna is said to have been killed in 654 in the 19th y. of his reign), these dates leave too short a period for the reigns of Sigebert and Ecgric. (C) 654. (E) Em. bro. of Redwald. (G) Sexburh m. Earconberht K. of Kent; Aethelthryth m. 1. Tondberht ealdorman of the Southern Gyrwas, 2. Egfrith K. of Northumbria; Aethelburh abbess of Faremoutier-en-Brie; Wihtburh nun at Ely, d. 743 (ASC F 798—she is not mentioned by Bede but occurs also in FWGen and WM). WM records (GP, par. 74) that St. Germinius was reputed to be bro. of St. Aethelthryth and therefore s. of Anna, and in Liber Eliensis (p. 15) Anna is provided with two sons, Aldulfus (who was s. of Aethelheri bro. of Anna) and "sanctus Jurminus," latter from WM. Probably Anna had no s.

AETHELHERE. (B) 654. (C) 15 Nov. 654 (killed at the Winwaed fighting in Penda's army). (E) Em. bro. of Redwald. (F) Here-swith sis. of Hild abbess of Whitby. (G) ? K. Aldwulf q.v.; ? K. Alfwold q.v. (H) E. Anglia clearly under overlordship of Penda in this reign.

ETHELWOLD. (B) late 654. (C) 664 (FW only, possibly inference from passage in Bede relating to regnal years of successor) (E) Eni bro. of Redwald.

ALDWULF. (B) 663 or 664 (council of Hatfield Sept 679 held in his 17th y) (C) 713 (Plummer's Bede, II, 107, citing continental annals; from H.E. it is clear that he was living in Bede's time and that he was dead before the H.E. was written). (E) Hereswith, sis. of abbess Hild of Whitby and (probably) K. Athelhere. (Bede states that he was son of the abbess Hild's sis Hereswith who m. K. Aethelhere, but does not say that this k was his father. FW and WM regard him as s. of Aethelhere and Hereswith. The oldest authority apart from Bede, the 9th-century genealogies (SwGen) give Ethelric s. of Eni as his father—this Ethelric would be bro. of Anna and Ethelhere—but Hereswith cannot have taken a second husband for she retired from the world before 650 if not before 647, i.e. before her husband's death. Ethelric of SwGen must therefore be an error for Aethelhere) (G) Ecgburh, abbess (Life of St Guthlac), <sup>2</sup> K Alfwold q v, Elric in Nen, par 59 seems to be error for Alfwold, Aethelburh and Hwaetburh abbesses of Hackness reputed to be his daus. but evidence insufficient ALFWOLD (B) 713 (probably) (C) 749 (SD). (E) Uncertain he was bro. or s. of Aldwulf (FW and WM regard him as s. of K. Ethelhere and Hereswith, but since the latter took the veil before 650 or even before 647 she cannot have been his mother unless he lived to be about 100 y. old or more Plummer, Bede, II, 107, suggests that he was s. of Ethelhere by second w, but Ethelhere died 654. Possibly SwGen which makes Aelfwald s. of Alduulf is here correct.) (H) Life of St. Guthlac by Felix is dedicated to him (not impossible but may be error for Ethelbald of Mercia). Since 9th-century genealogy terminates with him he may have been the last of the Wuffingas.

HUNBEANNA AND ALBERHT divided the kingdom between them in 749 according to SD (not recorded in any other authority)

BEORNA is given as successor of Alfwold in FWGen and WM—contemporary of Offa of Mercia (FWGen) Reigning 758 (FW) Possibly identical with Hunbeanna above. [Beonna known only from a coin (Catalogue of Coins in B M, I 83) possibly identical with Beorna of FW and WM, but G C Brooke, English Coins, thinks that this sceat "should probably find a place in the Northumbrian coinage."]

ETHELRED successor of Beorna according to FWGen where his q is named Leofruna.

ETHELBERT s. of K Ethelred and Leofrun executed at command of Offa K. of Mercians in 794 (ASC, ASN)

None of the E. Anglian ks between Ethelbert and Edmund occurs in literary sources. From the evidence of coins it has been suggested that Eadwald c 819-c. 827, Athelstan c 828-c 837, Ethelweard c 837-c. 850 and Beorhtric c. 852 held the kingdom (Catalogue of Coins in B.M.) but these dates are purely conjectural and the order of the ks, if they were all rulers of E. Anglia, is likewise uncertain. The coins of Eadwald closely resemble those of Offa and Cenwulf of Mercia upon whom he was presumably dependent. Those of Beorhtric belong in the opinion of G. C. Brooke to Beorhtric K of W. Saxons. Evidence of coins suggests that Athelstan was succeeded by Ethelweard and he by Edmund q.v.

EDMUND. (A) 841 or 842 (14 at accession and 29 at death). (B) 855 (ASN). (C) 20 Nov. 870.

(? ETHELRED. ? OSWALD. FW and WM state that there was no E. Anglian k. between Edmund and Guthrum. E. Anglian coins issued about this time by a k. named Ethelred are thought to belong to Ethelred I of the W. Saxons, but two coins seem to point to the existence of an E. Anglian k. named Oswald c. 870.)

KINGS OF THE SOUTH SAXONS

AELLE founder of the S. Saxon kingdom, said to have landed 477 (ASC) with his s. Cymen, Wlencing and Cissa. Parentage unknown—genealogy of S. Saxon royal house not preserved. First overlord of the Southern English (Bede).

? CISSA. The date of Aelle's death is uncertain and the names of his successors are unrecorded, HH, sub an. 514, states that "about this time" Aelle d. and was succeeded by Cissa, but origin of statement unknown.

AETHELWALH. (B) Unknown—before 674 (baptized in Mercia in reign of Wulfhere—Bede). (C) Between 680 and 685 (killed by Caedwalla before he became K. of W. Saxons, during period when St. Wilfrid living among S. Saxons, i.e. 680–5—Bede and Eddius). (F) Eaba dau. of Eanfrid bro. of Aenheri of the Hwiccas.

BERHTHUN AND ANDHUN two duces of K. Aethelwalh ruled kingdom after driving out Caedwalla (680–5). Berththun killed by Caedwalla 685–8 and Sussex subject to Wessex during part of reigns of Caedwalla and Ini (c. 685–726).

? EADRIC described as successor of Aethelwalh by WM, almost certainly identical with Eadric member of Kentish royal house who in 685 overthrew K. Hlothhere with S. Saxon assistance and himself reigned as K. of Kent 685–6; possible that Eadric was k. of S. Saxons in 685 but WM's statement probably mere expansion of Bede.

NOTHELM, NUNNA (Nunna probably short form of Nothelm) reigning late 7th and early 8th centuries (grantor of CS 78 dated 692, probably genuine, witnesses CS 80, undated, probably genuine, grantor of CS 132 dated 714, doubtful, grantor of CS 144 dated 775 amended to c. 725 by Birch—text so uncertain and corrupt that little reliance can be placed upon it, grantor of CS 145 undated).

WATTUS contemporary of Nothelm (witnesses CS 78 dated 692; witnesses CS 80 and 144).

? AETHELSTAN rex, who with w Aethelthryth regina witnesses Nunna's charter dated 714 (CS 132).

OSMUND rex (grantor of CS 198 dated 3 Aug 762 for 765, grantor of CS 206 dated 770, ? identical with Osiai rex who witnesses CS 197 undated and of doubtful authenticity; ? Osmundus rex who confirms charter of Nunna, CS 145 undated, ? Osmundus dux who witnesses spurious charter of Offa, CS 208, dated 772).

(? OSWALD dux Suth Saxonum who witnesses spurious charter of Offa K. of Mercia, CS 208, dated 772).

(? ETHELBERT rex, grantor of two undated charters, CS 211, 212, both of doubtful authenticity).

OSLAC dux, grantor of charter of 780 confirmed by K. Offa of Mercians (CS 1334 original, CS 237).

ALDWULF, grantor (rex) of CS 197, undated, grantor (dux) of CS 262, undated, which belongs to 770-86, grantor (dux) of CS 261 dated 711 amended to 791.

(? AELHWALD rex, who attests undated charter of Aldwulf, CS 197)

KINGS OF THE EAST SAXONS

The names of the heathen ks of the E Saxons are unknown. Saeberht is the earliest k mentioned by Bede and in ASC and he heads FW's regnal list. According to WM, Sledda, father of Saeberht was the first k, but HH attributes the foundation of the kingdom to Erchenwin (i.e. Aescwine) s of Offa. Sledd, father of Saeberht, Aescwine, father of Sledd, and Offa, father of Aescwine occur in the 9th-century genealogies (SwGen) and in FWGen (in which works the ancestry of the East Saxon ks. is traced back to Seaxnete) but this does not necessarily indicate that they were ks. WM and HH may have had access to ancient material otherwise unknown but it is more probable that their statements are inferences from the genealogies.

SAEBERHT. (B) Unknown (before 604). (C) 616 or 617 (Plummer's Bede, II, 88; FW dates event 616). (E) Sledd and Ricula sis of Ethelbert K. of Kent (Bede). (G) Three s (Bede, not mentioning names). K. Sexred (FWGen, WM) q.v., K. Saeward (SwGen, FW, WM) q.v., name of third s unknown. (H) E. Saxons converted to Christianity under him in 604 (Bede).

SEXRED AND SAEWEARD. Joint-ks. (B) 616 or 617. (C) ? c. 617 (killed fighting W Saxons soon after accession, Bede). (E) s. of K. Saeberht. (G) Sexred apparently died childless, only recorded s. of Saeward was K. Sigebert "Parvus," q.v. Possibly K. Sebbi q.v. was s. of Sexred or Saeward.

SIGEBERT I "PARVUS." (B) ? c. 617. (C) Unknown (before c. 653). (E) K. Saeward (SwGen, FW, WM). (C) K. Sighere q.v.

SIGEBERHT II "SANCTUS" (FW). (B) Uncertain, c. 653. (C) Uncertain, before 664 (E) Sigebald (SwGen, FW). (G) K. Saelred q.v.

SWITHELM (B) Uncertain—between 653 and 664 (C) Uncertain—between 653 and 664 (E) Sexbald (Bede, Swithelm is described as bro of Sigebert by FW and WM but this must be erroneous).

SIGHERE. (B) ? c. 664 (reigning jointly with Sebbi in 664 (Bede). (C) Unknown (pre-deceased Sebbi—this seems to be implied by Bede and is stated as a fact by FW and WM. Roger of Wendover, upon what authority unknown, assigns his death to 683. Both ks were reigning c. 675 when Erkenwald became bishop of London). (E) Sigebert (SwGen) Parvus (FW and WM). (F) Not mentioned by early authorities; legend that St. Osyth was his w. probably without foundation. (G) K. Offa q.v.

SEBBI. (B) ? c. 664 (reigning jointly with Sighere in 664); sole k. from death of Sighere. (C) c. 694; resigned between 692 and 694 (reigned 30 y. and abdicated after death of Bishop Erkenwald who d. 692 or 693). (E) Seaxred (according to SwGen, Saeward s. of St. Sigebert according to FW, Saeward WM). (G) K. Sigheard and K. Swaefred (Bede) q.v., Swaebhard K. of Kent q.v. appears to have been his s.

SIGHEARD. (B) c. 694, joint-k with Swaefred his bro (C) Uncertain (before 709). (E) K. Sebbi. (G) Sigemund father of K. Swithred (SwGen).

SWAEFRED. (B) c. 694, joint-k. with his bro. Sigheard. (C) Uncertain (before 709). (E) K. Sebbi

OFFA (B) Uncertain (between 694 and 709) (C) Unknown; abdicated and went to Rome 709 (Bede, in 4th y. of reign of Osred of Northumbria, i.e. 708–9, ASC all MSS. except C 709, C and FW 708). (E) K. Sighere (Bede). (G) Alleged by WM and FW to have been betrothed to Cyneswitha dau. of Penda K. of Mercia in 709 but this chronologically impossible and contrary to language of Bede which proves that he was m. at this date (H) The successor of Sigheard and Swaefred in SDGen is an otherwise unknown K. Swebertus with whom the list ends—presumably error.

SAELRED. (B) c. 709. (C) 746 (ASC, FW, in 38th y. of reign FW, WM). (E) K. Sigebert (sanctus). (G) K. Sigeric q.v.

SWITHRED. (B) c. 746. (E) Sigemund descendant of K. Sebbi (SwGen). (H) Entered as Swithred in FW's regnal list but called Swithaed in genealogical tree; WM also calls him Swithedus and states incorrectly that he was expelled by Egbert K. of W. Saxons and Roger of Wendover an. 828 likewise.

SIGERIC. (C) Unknown; ? abdicated 799 when he went to Rome (ASC an. 798 F) (E) K. Saelred (SwGen, FWGen). (F) K. Sigered q.v.

SIGERED (B) ? 799 (reigning 805–7 according to traditions concerning Winchcombe abbey, Haddan and Stubbs, Councils, III, 574). (C) After 823, ? after 825. Attests genuine charters of Coenwulf of Mercia, CS 335 and 339, dated 811 as rex; CS 338 (Winchcombe) which he attests as rex Orientalium Saxonum is in present form spurious or inflated (811), and CS 340 a Canterbury charter dated 812 is a forgery; attests as subregulus diploma of Coelwulf of Mercia, CS 373, dated 823, genuine—this diploma also attested by Sigereð dux and proves that this personage who attests as late as 825 is not the E. Saxon k. May have been ruling in 825 when E. Saxons submitted to Egbert K. of W. Saxons. Wendover records expulsion by Egbert of E. Saxon k. whom he calls Swithredus, sub an. 828 (recte 827 since death of Ludecan occurs in same annal)—may be error for Sigereð. (E) K. Sigeric (SwGen, FW's genealogical tree). (H) Last known k. of E. Saxons—clearly under Mercian suzerainty.

KINGS OF THE WEST SAXONS

CERDIC. (B) 519. (C) 534. (E) Elesa. (G) Cynric q.v. (Cynric is regarded as s. of Cerdic in ASC Preface and an. 552, 597, 674, 685, 688 and in A, sub an. 855, and by Ethelwerd, FWGen and WM but SwGen and ASC 855 B, C and D make Creoda s. of Cerdic and father of Cynric).

CYNRIC. (B) 534 (by some authorities, e.g. ASC, an. 519, and Ethelwerd, Cynric is said to have ruled jointly with Cerdic 519–34). (C) 560. (E) Cerdic (or Creoda, see above). (G) Ceawlin q.v.; Cutha, Cuthwulf (? identical with Cutha), no evidence that Cwichealm whose death is recorded ASC 593 was Cynric's s.

CEAWLIN. (B) 560. (C) 593 (ceased to reign 591, probably dethroned). (E) Cynric. (G) Cuthwine. (H) Second overlord of the Southern English (Bede).

CEOL. (B) 591. (C) 597. (E) Cutha s. of Cynric (ASC 611, Cuthwulf bro. of Ceawlin FW, WM calls this k. Ceolric, as does ASC 591 E, and states that Cutha bro. of Ceawlin was his father). (G) ? K. Cynegils q.v. (according to ASC 611 but this is contrary to ASC 688).

CEOLWULF. (B) 597. (C) 611. (E) Cutha s. of Cynric (ASC 597 but called s. of Cynric, which is improbable, sub an. 674, FW describes Coelwulf as s. of Cutha and WM as bro. of Ceolric (i.e. Ceol) s. of Ceawlin's bro. Cutha). (G) Cuthgils (ASC, FW an. 674).

CYNEGILS. (B) 611. (C) 643. (E) Ceol s. of Cutha, Cynric's s. (ASC 611 FW and WM) or Cuthwine s. of Ceawlin (ASC 688). (G) Cwichealm (ASC 648, FW, while WM calls Cwichealm bro. of Cynegils), apparently joint-k. with Cynegils (described as k. by Bede, April 626 and in ASC 626 and 636) d. 636 leaving s. Cuthred, d. 661, who is described as k. ASC 639 and appears to have been joint-k. with Cynegils (? and Cenwalh); K. Cenwalh q.v.; K. Centwine q.v.; dau. unnamed by Bede (called Cyneburg in 12th-century life of St. Oswald) m. Oswald K. of Northumbria; ? Ethelwine, saint venerated at Athelney, WM—probably mythical. (H) First Christian k. of W. Saxons.

CENWALH (B) 643. (C) 672 (in exile in E Anglia 645-8). (E) K. Cynegils. (F) 1 sis. (unnamed) of Penda K. of Mercians; 2. Seaxburh (reigned after him). (H) Cenberht described as k. ASC 661 was possibly Cenwalh's colleague or a subregulus.

Q. SEAXBURH Apparently reigned 672-4 (her reign is reckoned as 1 y.).

CENFUS s. of Cenferth (s. of Cuthgils, see Ceolwulf above) according to FWGen held kingdom for 2 years, author here citing lost Dicta Aelfredi, but his reign is not mentioned in the annals or by any other writer.

AESCWINE. (B) 674 (C) 676. (E) Cenfus (ASC 674, FW 674; WM describes him as grandson of Cuthgils bro. of Cynegils, but Cuthgils and Cynegils appear to have been cousins).

CENTWINE. (B) 676 (C) 685 (FW), overthrown by Caedwalla in 685 (ASC) (E) K Cynegils. (F) Sis. (unnamed) of Iurminburg w of Egrfrith K of Northumbria (Eddius). (G) Bugge (Aldhelm's poem on her basilica or templum)

CAEDWALLA. (A) c. 659. (B) 685 (ASC, FW; Bede states that he had reigned 2 y. when he abdicated). (C) 20 April 689 (abdicated 688 and went to Rome where baptized 10 April 689, Bede). (E) Cenberht (described as k. ASC 661, great-grandson of Ceawlin ASC 685). (F) ? Centhryth (Kenedritha occurs in spurious Canterbury charter dated 687, CS 69).

INI. (B) 688 (Bede). (C) Unknown; abdicated 726 (Bede states that he had reigned 37 y., abdication recorded in ASC 726 C, D and E, 728 A, B) and went to Rome (death recorded ASC 726 F only, possibly error). (E) Cenred (described by FW as subregulus) s. of Ceolwald (grandson or great-grandson of Ceawlin). (F) Aethelburh.

AETHELHEARD. (B) 726. (C) ? 740 (ASC 740 C, D, E, F, 741 A, B, 739 Cont. Bed). (E) Unknown (Cerdic's stock). (F) Frithogyth (ASC 737)

CUTHRED. (B) 740 (ASN) (C) 756 (probably, since he reigned 16 y, but event recorded in ASC, sub an. 754). (G) ? Cynric d. 748 (called aetheling in ASC and cited by FW, HH calls him s. of Cuthred, possibly a guess).

SIGEBERHT (B) 756 (C) ? 757 (reigned 1 y, dethroned by Cynewulf 757, ASN; language of ASC 755 might suggest that he was killed in year of deposition) (E) subregulus Sigeric (FW only).

CYNEWULF. (B) 757 (C) 786 (reigned 29 y, ASN; 31 according to ASC), killed by Cyneheard, bro. of Sigebert (ASC 755). (E) Unknown (Cerdic's stock).

BEORHTRIC (B) 786 (ASN). (C) 802 (ASN). (E) Unknown (Cerdic's stock). (F) 789 (ASN) Eadburh dau of Offa K of Mercians.

EGBERT (B) 802 (C) 839 (reigned 37 y and 7 months) (E) Ealhmund (G) K. Ethelwulf q.v., Athelstan sub-k of Kent, Essex, Sussex and Surrey 839-c 851 (misunderstanding of ASC apparently led Ethelwerd and WM and FW to describe him as s. of Ethelwulf, no reason to suppose that Ethelwulf had a s. named Athelstan) (H) K. of Wessex only 802-25; acknowledged by Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Essex and E. Anglia after victory over Mercians at Ellandun 825; overlord of all English kingdoms 829-? 39; probably K. of Mercians 825 (coins).

ETHELWULF. (B) 839 (sub-k of Kent, Essex, Sussex, and Surrey 825-39; ruler of W Saxon kingdom 839-55, confined to Kent, Surrey, Sussex and Essex 855-8, see Stevenson's Asser, p. 196). (C) 13 Jan 858. (D) Rome and Frankish court early 855 to late 856. (E) K Egbert (F) 1 Osburh dau of ealdorman Oslac (? of Hampshire) K Ethelwulf's pincerna; 2. 1 Oct 856, Judith dau of Charles the Bald, K of the West Franks (G) (? all children of Osburh) K Ethelbald q.v., K Ethelbert q.v.; K Ethelred I q.v.; K Alfred q.v.; Aethelswyth, m 853 Burgred, K of Mercians, d 888.

ETHELBALD (B) 855. (C) 860 (E) K. Ethelwulf and ? Osburh. (F) 858 or 859 Judith, his father's wid.

ETHELBERT. (B) 860 (sub-k in Kent, Surrey, Sussex and Essex 858-60). (C) 866. (E) K Ethelwulf and ? Osburh.

ETHELRED. (B) 866 (C) April 871. (E) K Ethelwulf and ? Osburh. (G) (probably s. of this k) Aethelhelm (K Alfred in his will calls him s. of his bro) ? ealdorman of Wilts who d 898 or 900 (identification with Athelm, archbishop of Canterbury 914-23 highly improbable); Ethelwald (revolted against Edward the Elder and killed at battle of the Holme 902).

ALFRED. (A) 849 (B) April 871. (C) 26 Oct. 899 (see Stevenson, Eng. Hist. Rev., xiii, and Beaven, ibid., xxxii). (E) K Ethelwulf and Osburh. (F) 869 Ealhswith dau. of Ethelred "Mucill" ealdorman of the "Gairi" and Eadburh "de regali genere Merciorum regis" (G) (See Stevenson's Asser, p. 299), Ethelflaed "lady of the Mercians" m. (before 893) Ethelred, ealdorman of the Mercians, d. 917, K Edward the Elder q.v., Aethelgeofu, abbess of Shaftesbury, Aelfthryth m. (after 893) Baldwin II, Count of Flanders; Aethelweard d 16 Oct 921 (FW alone gives date of his death and places it under 922, but he post-dates death of K. Edward by 1 y and WM says that Aethelweard d. 4 y. before Edward) There is no ground for ascribing to Alfred a s. Edmund (H) Direct ruler of Wessex and English Mercia but no satisfactory evidence that he had any authority over Danish kingdoms of York and E. Anglia and the territory of the Five Boroughs; regarded as protector of the English in regions under Danish rule; overlord of Eadwulf, independent ruler of English of Bernicia, and overlord of Welsh princes.

EDWARD THE ELDER (B) Oct 899, crowned 8 June 900. (C) 17 July 925 (Eng. Hist. Rev., xxxix). (E) K Alfred and Ealhswith.

(F) 1 Ecgwynn (FW, WM); 2 Aelflaed dau of ealdorman Aethelhelm; 3 Eadgifu dau. of Sighelm (CS 1064). (G) (On children see Stubbs' preface to WM's Gesta Regum and R. L. Poole, "The Alpine son-in-law of Edward the Elder," Eng. Hist. Rev., xxvi, and Studies in Chronology and History). 1. by Ecgwynn—K Athelstan, q.v. (WM records that Athelstan's enemies alleged that he was illegitimate and that Ecgwynn was concubine, but this improbable in view of favour shown to him in infancy by K. Alfred—Stevenson's Asser, p. 184), and (according to WM, but FW regards her as dau of Eadgifu) a dau. who married Sihtric K. of Danes of York, 30 Jan. 926; 2. by Aelflaed—Aelfward (miscalled Ethelward by WM) d. 1 Aug. 925, appears from Liber Vitae of New Minster and Hyde to have attained kingly dignity and may have been sub-k. of Mercia during few days he survived his father, or (less probably) associated with Edward during his lifetime; Eadwine (WM, but according to FW he was s. of Eadgifu) drowned 933 (ASC E), according to SD by command of Athelstan which supports WM's story, though latter seems partly mythical, but Folcwin of St. Bertin's where Eadwine was buried, while silent as to alleged murder, suggests exile following political rivalry—called rex by Folcwin and may have been sub-k. (?) in Kent, suggestion of Plummer, Two Saxon Chronicles, but no evidence to support it), Eadflaed, nun, buried at Wilton (WM only), Eadgifu (FW regards her as dau. of Eadgifu) m. (i) before 925 Charles the Simple K. of French (WM and Ethelwerd), (ii) Herbert C. of Troyes; Aethelhild, recluse buried at Wilton (WM only); Eadhild m. (after 925) Hugh the Great D. of the French, Eadgyth (according to FW dau. of Eadgifu) m. 930 (see Plummer, Two Saxon Chronicles, ii, 122), Otto (Emperor Otto the Great) s. of Henry the Fowler K. of Germany—she d. 26 Jan. 946, Aelfgifu (sent to Henry the Fowler with her sis, WM regards her as w. of Otto, but this is contrary to Ethelwerd) m. according to Ethelwerd a k. near the "mountains of Jupiter" and WM a duke near the Alps but identity of husband uncertain—possibly Alberic (s. of Majolus C. of Narbonne) who was according to a charter (probably spurious) bro.-in-law of K. Edred, possibly C. Charles Constantine (s. of Emperor Lewis the Blind) who was in possession of Vienne in 931 (Flodoard), but most likely to have been, as Dr. Poole suggests, Conrad the Peaceable, K. of Burgundy, 3. by Eadgifu—K. Edmund q.v., K. Edred q.v., Eadburh called "sancta" (FW) a nun at Winchester (WM), Eadgifu m. after 925 Lewis "Aquitatorum princeps" (WM) identified by Stubbs with Lewis the Blind, K. of Lower Burgundy and sometime emperor, who d. 928, but identification questioned by Poole. (H) Annexed to Wessex the Danelaw to the Humber (E. Anglia and Five Boroughs); overlordship acknowledged in 919 by Ragnald Scandinavian k. at York, by K. of Scots, K. of Strathclyde Britons, Ealdred s. of Eadwulf ruler of English of Bernicia and by Welsh princes.

ATHELSTAN. (A) 895 (B) Summer 925 (possibly first chosen K. of W Saxons only and became K. of Mercia as well on death of his bro. Aelfward who survived K. Edward by 16 days), crowned at Kingston 4 Sept. 925. (C) 27 Oct. 939. (D) Scotland 934 (army devastated Scotland "usque Dunfoeder (Dunfether) et Wertermorum" and fleet as far as Caithness—SD) (E) K. Edward the Elder and Ecgywynn. (H) Established direct rule over Danes of York from expulsion of Guthfrith 927 to end of his reign (chronicles and coins), and defeated combination headed by Anlaf Guthfrithson from Dublin, Constantine K. of Scots and Owen K. of Strathclyde Britons at Brunanburh 937.

EDMUND. (A) 921. (B) Oct. 939. (C) 26 May 946 (murdered by outlaw Leofa at Pucklechurch). (E) K. Edward the Elder and Eadgifu. (F) 1. Aelfgyfu "sancta" d. 944; 2. Aethelflaed "of Domesham" dau. of ealdorman Aelfgar (seems to have taken as second husband an ealdorman named Aethelstan and her will appears to be later than 975, Whitelock Anglo-Saxon Walls ix) (G) by Aelfgyfu—K. Eadwig q.v.; K. Eadgar q.v. (H) In summer or autumn 940 Anlaf Guthfrithson invaded territory of Five Boroughs and compelled Edmund to cede all north of Watling St; 942 Edmund recovered Five Boroughs and later forced Anlaf Sihtricson and Ragnald rulers of Danes of York in turn to submit to him; 944 Edmund expelled both and extinguished (temporarily) kingdom of York; 944–6 ruler of all England and overlord of Scots.

EDRED. (A) Unknown (? c. 925—younger than Edmund who was b. 921). (B) May 946 (C) 23 Nov. 955 (E) K. Edward the Elder and Eadgifu. (H) For greater part of period 948–54 Danish kingdom of York was independent of him and ruled by either Anlaf Sihtricson or Eric Bloodaxe (see relevant section), after Eric's final expulsion in 954 Edred established his authority over whole of England and his overlordship acknowledged by the Scots

RULERS OF DANISH KINGDOM OF EAST ANGLIA

GUTHRUM (assumed name Aethelstan at baptism), k. from 880 (ASC) to 890 (ASN, ASC all except C which like FW has 891; FW and WM state wrongly that he reigned 12 y.).

ERIC (EOHRIC), possibly became k. in 890, killed at battle of the Holme 902; last recorded K. of East Anglia.

RULERS OF SCANDINAVIAN KINGDOM OF YORK

HALFDAN s. of Ragnar Lothbrok, founded kingdom 875 or 876, expelled from Northumbria 877 and killed later in Ireland (Catalogue of Coins in B.M., p. lxxvii. Expelled 883 according to SD).

GUTHRED (CNUT) (B) 883 (SD). (C) 24 Aug. 894 (SD) or 895 (Ethelwerd). (E) Harthacnut (SD). (H) Guthred is generally identified with k. named Cnut whose coins have survived (Catalogue of Coins in B.M.). Said by compiler of regnal lists printed as appendix to SD's Hist. Reg., (ed. Arnold, ii, 377) to have reigned 14 y. but account seems untrustworthy.

SIEGFRED (Seifred, Sievert), possibly became k. c. 894; evidence of coins suggests that he succeeded Guthred-Cnut (existence of coins bearing names of both does not necessarily indicate joint rule). SD in Hist. Dun. Eccles., ii, chap. 14, preserves tradition (improbable) that Alfred K. of Wessex ruled Northumbria after Guthred's death.

ETHELWALD (s. of Ethelred I K. of Wessex) driven out of Wessex by his cousin K. Edward the Elder 899 and took refuge with the Danes of Northumbria who received him as k.; seems to have left Northumbria for E. Anglia soon after and was killed at battle of the Holme 902.

HALFDAN, possibly became k. c. 902; killed at Tettenhall 909. In FW's genealogy he is identified with earlier k. of same name, and he and Eowils are said to have reigned 26 y. but account is confused.

EOWILS (Ecwils, ? Eogils), apparently joint-k. with Halfdan his bro., killed at Tettenhall 909.

IVAR, apparently joint-k. with Halfdan and Eowils his bros.; killed at Tettenhall (Ethelwerd only).

RAGNALD (s. of a dau. of Ivar [Ingwar] the Boneless, eldest of s. of Ragnar Lothbrok) invaded Northumbria between 912 and 915 and secured York in 919 (SD), acknowledged overlordship of K. Edward the Elder in same year and d. 921. Said by FWGen to have reigned more than 10 y.

SIHTRIC CAOCH. (B) 921. (C) 927. (E) He was grandson of Ivar the Boneless. (F) 1 name unknown, 2 926 sis. of K. Athelstan. (G) By 1. Anlaf Sihtricson q.v.

GUTHFRITH. (B) 927. (C) Expelled from Northumbria by K. Athelstan 927. (E) He was grandson of Ivar and bro. of Sihtric. (G) Anlaf Guthfrithson q.v. (H) Kingdom of York ruled directly by Athelstan 927-39.

ANLAF GUTHFRITHSON (B) Late 939 (after death of K. Athelstan) or early 940 (C) 941. (E) Guthfrith (F) Dau. of Constantine III K. of Scots (FW). (H) Defeated by K. Athelstan at Brunanburh 937 and retired to Dublin where he was k.; late in summer or autumn 940 invaded territory of Five Boroughs and forced K. Edmund to cede all north of Watling St.—independent of W. Saxon k. Concerning Anlaf and his successors see Beavan, Eng Hist Rev, xxxiii, "Edmund I and the Danes of York."

ANLAF SIHTRICSON (Cuaran). (B) 941 (C) ? c. 980. (E) Sihtric Caoch. (H) 942 Edmund K. of Wessex recovered from him the Five Boroughs, early 943 Anlaf acknowledged overlordship of Edmund and was baptized; later in y. Danes of Northumbria drove him out but he seems to have struggled with Ragnald for the throne in 944, in which year he was again driven from York; had returned to Ireland by 945 but again established himself at York 949; expelled by Danes 952 and returned to Ireland. For his later career see Todd, Wars of the Gaedhul with the Gaill, pp. 278 seq.

RAGNALD GUTHFRITHSON. (B) Summer 943 (acknowledged as k. when Anlaf expelled) (C) 944 killed at York (had acknowledged overlordship of Edmund 943, and in 944 Edmund drove out both Scandinavian claimants). (E) Father was Guthfrith bro. of Sihtric Caoch (Ragnald was bro. of Anlaf Guthfrithson). (H) Danish kingdom of York under direct rule of K. Edmund 944-6 and of K. Edred 946-8.

ERIC BLOODAXE (s. of Harold Fairhair K. of Norway) established himself as k. 948, driven out same y. but received back after expulsion of Anlaf Sihtricson 952, finally expelled 954 and killed in same y. at Stanmoor. With expulsion of Eric, line of Danish and Norwegian ks. at York ended, K. Edred direct ruler of Northumbria 954-6 and his successors likewise.

KINGS OF ENGLAND

The extinction of the Scandinavian kingdom of York in 954 in a sense marks the permanent unification of England under a single monarch, though the kingdom was divided on two or possibly three occasions (between Edwy and Edgar, between Edmund Ironside and Cnut, and ? between Harthacnut and Harold Harefoot) in the succeeding period. In the earlier phase of Anglo-Saxon history the following ks. were overlords of the Southern English—Aelle, K. of the S Saxons, Ceawlin, K. of the W. Saxons; Aethelbert, K. of Kent; Redwald, K. of the E Angles, Edwin, K. of Northumbria; Oswald, K. of Northumbria, Oswiu, K. of Northumbria; Wulfhere, K. of the Mercians, Ethelbald, K. of the Mercians, Offa, K. of the Mercians, and Egbert, K. of the W Saxons. Edward the Elder's suzerainty extended over the whole of England (but he was not direct ruler of the Danish kingdom of York) and the three following ks. exercised direct rule over the whole of England during parts of their reigns—Athelstan 927-39, Edmund 939-40 and 944-6, Edred 954-6 (and parts of the period 946-54).

EDWY. (A) Unknown—a little before 943. (B) Nov. 955, crowned at Kingston in same y. (C) 1 Oct. 959 (authority confined to Wessex after revolt of Mercians and Northumbrians in 957). (E) K. Edmund and Aelfgifu. (F) 956 or early 957, Aelfgifu dau. of Aethelgifu (separated 958)

EDGAR. (A) 943 (FW). (B) K. of Mercia and the Danelaw 957-9; K. of all England 959. Crowned 11 May 973 (C) 8 July 975 (E) K. Edmund and Aelfgifu. (F) 1. Aethelflaed (Candida, cognomento Eneda, FW) dau. of ealdorman Ordmaer; 2. Wulfthryth (sancta FW, by some writers regarded as a concubine); 3. 964 or 965 (or possibly earlier, see Crawford Charters, p. 85) Aelfthryth dau. of ealdorman Ordgar (of Devonshire) and wid. of Aethelwold, eldest s. of Athelstan "half-king," d. 999-1002. (G) 1. by Aethelflaed—Edward the Martyr q.v., 2. by Wulfthryth—Eadgyth sancta (FW) nun at Wilton d. age 23 before 988 (WM); 3. by Aelfthryth—Edmund d. 971, K. Ethelred (Unraed) q.v.

EDWARD THE MARTYR. (A) c. 962 (B) 975 (? July) (C) 18 March 979 (date of murder at Corfe 978 in ASC A and C and FW, 979 in ASC E, D and F but evidence of Ethelred's charters seems to support 979). (E) K Edgar and Aethelflaed (H) From the Vita Oswaldi (Hist. of Ch. of York, R.S., I, 448) it appears that death of Edgar was followed by period of civil war, length of which cannot be determined, whole of Edward's reign may have been period of anarchy and impossible to determine when he was universally recognized.

ETHELRED (UNRAED). (A) 968-9 (WM Gesta Regum). (B) March 979 (crowned 14 April 979). (C) 23 April 1016 (dispossessed of the kingdom 1013-14 by Swegn Forkbeard). (D) In exile in Normandy Jan. 1014-Lent 1014. (E) K. Edgar and Aelfthryth. (F) 1. Aelfgifu dau. of ealdorman Ethelbert (according to FW, oldest authority, but Aired of Rivaulx makes her dau. of ealdorman Thored); 2. Spring 1002, Emma, dau. of Richard I D of Normans. (G) 1. by Aelfgifu—Athelstan d. c. 1015 (attestations suggest he was eldest s though FW regards him as third), Egbert probably d. c. 1005 after which date he does not attest charters, Edmund Ironside q v.; Edred (probably d. 1012-15—Eadric of CD 1301 is presumably error for Eadred), Edwy, killed by Cnut's command 1017, Edgar probably d. 1009-15, (Ethelred is sometimes said to have had a s Edward by his first w but the evidence is very weak—CD 643 attested by two s named Edward is spurious, Eadweard of CD 1297 (1002) may be error for Eadred, and Eadweard of the charters belonging to 1005 seq is probably Edward the Confessor); Eadgyth m 1 Earl Eadric Streona (executed 1017) 2. ? Earl Thurkil the Tall; Aelfgifu m Uhtred E of Northumbria (SD), ? Wulfhild m Ulfcytel E of E. Anglia; ? dau. unnamed m. Athelstan who was killed at Ringmere 1010—he is described as K Ethelred's "aðum" i.e. either s.-in-law (FW gener) or bro.-in-law (sororius in Annales Monastici, Waverley); ? dau. unnamed, abbess of Wherwell (ASC E 1048); 2. children of Emma—Alfred (murdered 1036), Edward the Confessor q v. (twin s), Godgifu (Goda) m. 1. Drew C. of Mantes who d. 1035, 2. Eustace C. of Boulogne.

SEWGN FORKBEARD (K. of Denmark 987-1014) was acknowledged as k. of all England from autumn 1013 to his death 3 February 1014 but was not crowned

EDMUND IRONSIDE. (A) c. 993. (B) Chosen K at London April 1016, later in same y. made agreement with Cnut whereby he secured Wessex and left Cnut in possession of rest of England (C) 30 Nov. 1016. (E) K. Ethelred and Aelfgifu. (F) Summer 1015, Ealdgyth wid. of Sigferth an Anglo-Scandinavian thegn (G) Edmund m Hedwig dau. of Stephen K of Hungary, Edward (d. 1057) m. Agatha kinswoman of Emperor Henry II (Edgar Etheling was his s).

CNUT. (A) c. 995. (B) Chosen k by Danish fleet Feb. 1014 but failed to establish himself against Ethelred now recalled by the English, summer 1016 by agreement with Edmund Ironside secured Danelaw and Mercia: sole k. after Edmund's death

Nov 1016. (C) 12 Nov 1035. (D) Denmark (? autumn) 1019–spring 1020 (returned before 17 April), Denmark and Witland (i.e. Danish settlements on Baltic shore E of Vistula) 1022–3 (ASC E 1022 reads Wiht, hence some writers think Cnut went to Isle of Wight and thence probably to Denmark, but ASC D 1022 reads Wihtland), Denmark autumn 1025–spring 1026, summer 1026 sailed to Denmark to meet attack of Olaf of Norway and Anund of Sweden (battle of Holy River, Sept 1026); probably spent winter in Denmark, in Rome March–April 1027, returned to Denmark thence to England, late in 1027 led expedition into Scotland, Norway and Denmark 1028–9 (conquest of Norway). (E) Swegn Forkbeard and Gunhild (of Polish origin) (F) 1. (concubine) Aelfifu of Northampton dau of ealdorman Aelfhelm, 2. July 1017, Emma (d 1052) wid. of K. Ethelred. (G) 1 by Aelfifu of Northampton—Swegn, appointed (with mother) nominal regent in Wendland 1022–3, regent in Norway 1030–5, d. 1036, Harold Harefoot q.v.; 2. by Emma—K. Harthacnut q.v.; Gunhild (re-named Kunigund) m 1036 Henry (later Emperor Henry III) s. of Emperor Conrad II, d 16 July 1038 (H) K of Denmark 1019–1035, k. of Norway 1028–35 and lord of Orkneys and Shetlands and other Norse colonies, overlord of K. of Scots and (probably) of ruler of Norwegio-Irish kingdom of Dublin, by his regnal style “rex totius Angliae et Denemarchiae et Norreganorum et partis Suanorum” (proclamation of 1027) claims also authority over Swedes, unless Suanorum should be amended to Sclauorum (but emendation not supported by numismatic evidence). It is possible that Lothian was annexed by Malcolm K of Alban after his victory over E. Eadwulf at Carham 1018, but SD, who records the battle does not mention the loss of Lothian, while the author of the anonymous tract De Obsidione Dunelmi (SD, ed. Arnold, 1, 215, written c. 1090), who attributes the cession of Lothian to E. Eadwulf, does not mention the battle.

HAROLD HAREFOOT. (A) ? c. 1016–17 (B) Chosen joint-k. with Harthacnut his half bro. late 1035; sole k 1037. (C) 17 March 1040. (E) K Cnut and Aelfifu of Northampton (almost certainly, though this is denied in ASC C and D which regard him as no true s. of Cnut, and doubted by ASC E.) (F) Not known to have contracted a regular marriage but seems to have had a concubine named Aelfifu (G) ? Aelfwine (Alboynus) founder of monastery of Saint Foi at Conques in Aquitaine c 1060, who according to cartulary of that house was Englishman born in London—“pater eius Heroldus rex fuit Anglorum terrae, mater eius Alveva” (Stevenson, Eng Hist. Rev., xxviii, “An alleged s. of K. Harold Harefoot”). (H) ASC D seems to make Harold succeed to the whole kingdom immediately after Cnut’s death, and Harold’s order (ASC D, C) that royal treasure at Winchester should be taken from Q. Emma suggests that he regarded himself as father’s successor from moment of his death, but supporters of Harthacnut, particularly Q. Emma and E. Godwin, were strong enough to force compromise at Oxford (ASC E) whereby Harold was to rule all England in names of himself and Harthacnut until latter returned from Denmark From ASC C and D it is clear that Harold was not acknowledged as sole k. until 1037.

HARTHACNUT. (A) ? c. 1018. (B) Acknowledged as joint-k. with Harold late 1035 to early 1037, sole k. June 1040. (C) 8 June 1042. (E) K. Cnut and Emma. (H) Probable that in 1028, when he was made Cnut's representative in Denmark and given royal style he was acknowledged as heir to all Cnut's dominions. Agreement at Oxford (1035) possibly safeguarded his rights as overlord of England but war with Magnus K. of Norway prevented him from leaving Denmark until 1039 by which date his supporters in England had submitted to Harold or suffered expulsion.

EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. (A) Between 1002 and 1005. (B) ? June 1042, crowned 3 April 1043. (C) 5 Jan. 1066. (E) K. Ethelred and Emma (F) 23 Jan. 1045 Edith, dau. of Godwin E of Wessex. (H) Spent many y. in exile at Norman court but from 1041 resided with household of K. Harthacnut, latter fact however does not necessarily imply that Edward was in England at time of Harthacnut's sudden death and is not inconsistent with tradition that he was abroad in June, but biographer of Edward the Confessor and WM mistaken in describing embassy to Normandy. Edward had been made heir of, if not joint-k. with Harthacnut in 1041 (ASC C) and was therefore probably acknowledged as k. in June 1042, but existence in England of supporters of Scandinavian claimants Swegn Estrithson and Magnus of Norway suggests that his claim was not universally acknowledged until shortly before coronation.

HAROLD GODWINSON. (A) ? c. 1020. (B) 6 Jan. 1066. (C) 14 Oct. 1066 (E) Godwin E of Wessex and Gytha. (F) 1. (concubine) Eadgyth Swanneshals; 2. 1066, Ealdgyth dau. of Aelfgar E. of Mercia. (G) 1. believed to be children of Eadgyth Swanneshals—Godwin (FW 1068), Edmund (FW 1068); Magnus (FW 1068); Ulf (FW 1087, regarded by Freeman as s. of Ealdgyth); ? Gytha m. Waldemar K. of Novgorod; Gunhild nun at Wilton (WM Vita Wulfstani); 2. s. of Ealdgyth—Harold (FWGen).

[EDGAR ETHELING chosen k. by the Londoners and others after the battle of Hastings, Oct. 1066 but not apparently crowned. Submitted to William before Christmas of this year.]

SCOTLAND

NOTE—Our knowledge about the early kings of Alba, north of the Forth and Clyde, is not sufficient to satisfy the purpose of this list, which begins with the name of Malcolm II, the first king to reign over approximately the same area as that governed by the later rulers of Scotland.

Style of Scottish kings—The normal style of Scottish kings was King of Scots. The great seal shows "Rex Scottorum" from Duncan II to James II, except Edgar who has "Scottorum Basileus", from James III onwards it is "Rex Scottorum". The great seal of Duncan II is the earliest known; that of Alexander I is the first of duplex type. Down to Alexander III the great seals have Deo Rectore as has that of Robert I. John Balliol introduced Dei gratia and this was again used from David II onwards.

While the great seal always has "King of Scots" the form "Rex Scotiae" is used by Duncan II in his charter of 1094 to Durham, and occasionally by David I, if the Registers of St. Andrews and Dunfermline can be trusted, but not by the intervening kings. Duncan II's charter to Durham, it should be noted, was drafted in the monastery. "Rex Scotiae" is also found in the reign of John Balliol and after his deposition in charters granted by William Wallace and John de Soules in his name.

Mary on her marriage to Francis associated him with her acts of government. Charters were granted from 24 April 1558 by "Franciscus et Maria dei gratia Rex et Regina Scottorum (sometimes Scotiae) Delphinus et Delphina Viennensis", from July 1559 by "F and M Rex et Regina Francie et Scotie". Again Darnley is associated from 29 July 1565, and charters are in the names of "Henricus et Maria Rex et Regina Scottorum". Bothwell was not thus associated. After her deposition in 1567 Mary continued to style herself Queen of Scots and Dowager of France.

Regnal years—The tradition of Scottish historiography is that the regnal year was dated from the day of the last king's death. This was certainly the practice from Robert III onwards, but the dearth of diplomatic evidence renders it impossible to be certain about earlier reigns. There is no genuine Scottish charter extant before that of Duncan II to Durham in 1094, and none of his successors for the next three centuries gives both regnal year and that of the Christian era (David I frequently states only the place of granting). Analogies from English practice are not helpful because of the Celtic origin of the Scottish monarchy with its emphasis on heredity and because of the comparative unimportance of "coronation" in Scotland. By Celtic custom the tanist was associated with the reigning king and succeeded on his death. Duncan II is styled "constans hereditarie rex Scotiae" (Nat. MSS. of Scotland, I). During the lifetime of David I his grandson Malcolm was recognized and proclaimed as heir to the kingdom (Scotichr. V, 44). As late as the coronation of Alexander III "quidam Scotus senex, silvester et montanus" recited in Gaelic the ancestry of the new king, going back to Fergus, first king of Scots in Alba (Scotichr. X, 2). In the ceremony of coronation emphasis was laid on enthronement "in cathedra regali" at Scone, often stated with doubtful accuracy to be the privilege of the thanes of Fife. There is no evidence of anything in early Scottish coronations that corresponds to the Anglo-Saxon presentation of the king for acceptance by the people (still in use at the commencement of the English rite). The enthronement may have been regarded as the recognition or proclamation of one who had become king on his predecessor's death rather than as the commencement of his reign. The first Scottish king to receive unction was David II in terms of a bull of Pope John XXII.

Authorities—The chief authorities used are the Scotichronicon, the Exchequer Rolls of Scotland, the Register of the Great Seal, Bain's Calendar of Documents relating to Scotland, Rymer's Foedera, Rotuli Scotiae, and Sir A. Dunbar's Scottish Kings (2nd ed., Edinburgh, 1906). Various manuscripts in H. M. General Register House have also been consulted. For the extensive literature on the history of the coronation in Scotland, see the bibliographical note in P. E. Schramm, A History of the English Coronation, Oxford, 1937, pp. 242-3.

THE ISLE OF MAN

[The main authorities for the earlier sections of the following list of rulers are Chronica Regum Mannae et Insularum, ed P. A Munch, Christiania, 1860, and revised by Goss, 2 vols, Douglas, 1874 (Manx Society, xxii and xxxii), the Annals of Ulster, ed W. M Hennessy and B MacCarthy, 4 vols, Dublin, 1887-1901, Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland, by the Four Masters, ed. J O'Donovan, 7 vols, Dublin, 1851 A W Moore, History of the Isle of Man, 2 vols., London, 1900, gives a list of "Kings or Lords of Man" (ii, pp 973-80) beginning with Godred I He says "it is so difficult to identify the rulers of Man before his time that we have not attempted a list of them"

Abbreviations. M = Chronica Regum Mannae, FM = Annals of the Four Masters, U = Annals of Ulster]

NORWEGIAN SUZERAINTY

[Of the secular history of the Isle of Man before the Scandinavian incursions of the 9th century nothing is known. Man and the other islands between Ireland and Scotland appear after the Norwegian settlement "either to have been subjected to the Norwegian kings of Dublin or to have been ruled by several chieftains or vikings who did not adopt the title of king" (Goss, op cit., i, 124, translating Munch's notes) Some of the rulers of Man were clearly subject to the ks. of Norway]

KETIL FLATNEF, a Norwegian noble, is said by some authorities to have ruled Man as the representative of Harold Fairhair K of Norway, by others to have established himself as independent ruler against the wishes of that k., and while some statements would indicate that he secured the island late in the 9th century, there is reason to suppose that he may have established himself there about the middle of the century.

TRYGGVI one of the jarls of K. Harold Fairhair was entrusted with a region which no doubt included Man after that k's successful expedition against the Norwegians of these parts c. 870 or possibly later.

ASBJÖRN SKERJABLESI succeeded Tryggvi as the jarl of K. Harold and was later killed by the kinsmen of Ketil Flatnef, after which event K. Harold does not appear to have appointed another e. In the succeeding period Man was probably dependent upon the Norwegian ks. at Dublin some of whom ruled also the Scandinavian kingdom of York

RAGNALL (Ragnald) won in 913 (U) a naval battle off Man, of which he was probably ruler from this date or earlier until his death in 921 (ruling at York c 919-21) It is uncertain whether Man was dependent upon York or Dublin in the period 921-7, but between 927 and 939 when K. Athelstan ruled the kingdom of York, Man must presumably have been dependent upon Guthfrith K. of Dublin and his's. Anlaf Guthfrithson who succeeded him in 934.

MAC RAGNALL appears to have been ruler of Man in 940 in which y. he d (FM) and was probably dependent upon Anlaf Guthfrithson (vide supra) who reigned at York as well as Dublin from 939 or 940 to 941. Mac Ragnall may have had authority over Man during part or all of the period 921-40. In the period following his death and that of Anlaf Guthfrithson, Man may have been under the rule of Anlaf Sihtricson who was finally expelled from Northumbria and returned to Ireland in 952.

[K. "Gorree" or "Orrye," see Godred I (Crovan) below, is traditionally supposed to have arrived in the obscure period 918-47.]

MAC HAROLD (? Maccus s. of Harold, erroneously called Magnus s. of Harold by later writers, Christian name probably not preserved) ruler of the Isles, probably including Man, was reigning in 974 (FM, sub an. 972); ? killed 977.

GODRED S. OF HAROLD (? bro. of "Mac Harold") probably ruling 979 when he raided Anglesey, killed by the Dalriadic Scots 989 (Olaf Tryggvason K. of Norway appears to have established his suzerainty over Man in 985).

SIGURD E. OF ORKNEY may have had some authority over Man from c. 989 to 1014 when he was killed at Clontarf, and his s. THORFINN E. OF ORKNEY possibly had rights over Man, c. 1014-60, but Munch held that from 989 to 1079 "the island of Man must have been an appendage of the Norwegian kingdom of Dublin whereas it would appear that the Isles chiefly belonged to the Earls of Orkney"

[Moore, op. cit., i, 95, refers to the death of "Harold King of Man" in 1040, citing U, but the k. whose death is recorded in that annal is Harold Harefoot K. of England]

MAC RAGNALL (called Godred s. of Ragnall, bro. of Eachmarcach K. of Dublin, by Moore) defeated in 1060 by Murchadh s. of Diarmaid who made Man tributary to Dublin.

GODRED S. OF SYTRIC reigning in 1066 (M); d. 1070 (Munch held that Godred probably belonged to the dynasty at Dublin—possibly identical with Godred "grandson of Ragnald" ruler of Dublin).

FINGAL s. of Godred s. of Sytric succeeded 1070 (M), apparently expelled 1079

GODRED I (Crovan) 1079-95. ? s. of Harald the Black of Ysland, conjectured by Munch to be grandson of Godred s. of Harold q.v.; ? identical with Godred "Mananagh" ruler of Dublin; d. 1095 leaving three s. Lagman q.v., Harold (mutilated by Lagman c. 1095) and Olaf I q.v. [Godred conquered Man in 1079 (M, sub an. 1056), subjugated Dublin and a great part of Leinster (ibid.); said to have been deprived of the Isles by Magnus Barefoot K. of Norway 1093-4 (M, pp. 147 seq., Munch's notes) He is probably the K. "Gorree" or "Orrye" of Manx traditions.]

LAGMAN 1095-76. S. of Godred I Said to have reigned 7 y (M) and may have ruled Man during part of Godred's reign Took the cross and d at Jerusalem 1096 or 1097

DONALD S OF TEIGE 1096-78. Sent by Murchadh O'Brien K of Dublin (apparently ally and dependent of Magnus K of Norway) as regent for Olaf s of Godred, but seized the throne ; said to have reigned 3 y (M)

MAGNUS K. OF NORWAY 1098-1103 Magnus himself was in Man 1098-9 and from either 1099 or 1102 until 1103 his s. SIGURD was apparently K of the Western Isles including Man.

OLAF I 1103-53. S. of Godred I, m. 1. Affrica dau of Fergus of Galloway (M), 2 Ingibjorg dau of Hacon E of Orkney (Munch). Godred s. of Affrica was apparently Olaf's only legitimate child ; other children by concubines—Reginald, Lagman, Harold, and many daus one of whom (Ragnhild) m Sumerled lord of Argyll q.v. [M. places accession of Olaf in 1102 and states that he reigned 40 y. Some modern writers have assumed that Olaf's reign did not begin until 1113, supposing that part of the reigns of Lagman and Donald fall in the period 1103-13, but it is more reasonable to suppose with Munch that Olaf reigned 50 y. Godred, afterwards Godred II, went to Norway and did homage on behalf of his father c. 1152 (M).]

GODRED II 1152-8 and 1164-87 S of Olaf and Affrica Expelled by Sumerled lord of Argyll and took refuge in Norway ; recovered Man in 1164 after death of Sumerled and overthrow of Reginald. d 10 Nov. 1187 leaving 3 s, Reginald (illegitimate) q.v., Olaf (nominated successor) q.v. and Ivar.

SUMERLED lord of Argyll, 1058-64. Usurper ; m. dau of Olaf I ; expelled Godred 1158, killed 1164.

[REGINALD 1164 Usurper ; s. (illegitimate) of Olaf I and bro. of Godred II by whom he was overthrown 4 days after his seizure of Man on Sumerled's death ]

REGINALD I 1187-1226. Eldest s (illegitimate) of Godred II ; expelled by Olaf II 1226, recovered Man for brief period in 1228 ; murdered Feb. 1229, m. sis. of Lauon of Kentyre (M). Godred Don his s. shared the " kingdom of Man and the Isles " with Olaf II in 1230 and was killed later in the same y. (M)

OLAF II 1226-37. S of Godred II He d. 21 May 1237 ; m. 1. Lauon of Kentyre (marriage subsequently annulled), 2. Christina dau. of Ferquhard E of Ross, by whom apparently he had four s — Harold I q.v., Reginald II q.v., Godred d. 1237 and Magnus q.v. In 1229 or 1230 Olaf went to Norway and presumably did homage to K. Hacon.

HAROLD I 1237-48. S. of Olaf II ; succeeded at age of 14 y. [Agents of the K of Norway took possession of the island and revenues 1238 by reason of Harold's refusal to present himself at the Norwegian court. Harold went to Norway 1239 and spent

2 y. there with K. Hacon who confirmed to him Man and the Isles. Visited court of Henry III of England Easter 1246 (M and Matthew Paris). Again visited Norway 1247 and m. dau. (? Cecilia or Christina) of K. Hacon. Shipwrecked and drowned with w. returning from Norway Oct. or Nov. 1248]

REGINALD II 6 May-30 May 1249 Bro. of Harold II; murdered 30 May (M, but 1 July according to Chronicle of Lanercost) by Ivar a knight (Harold s. of Godred Don q v apparently his accomplice).

HAROLD II 1249-50 or 52. S. of Godred Don; usurper ("nomen regis et dignitatem sibi usurpans in Mannia" M), summoned to Norwegian court 1250 and deprived of Man. Possibly as A. W. Moore conjectures (op. cit., i, 130) the knight Ivar ruled Man 1250-2.

MAGNUS 1252-65. S. of Olaf II, m. dau. of Eogan of Argyll; in Norway May 1253-4 and made by K. Hacon "regem super omnes insulas quas antecessores ejus jure hereditario possidebant" (M); Easter 1256 visited court of Henry III (M and Matthew Paris); c. 1264 became vassal of Alexander III K. of Scots, d. 24 Nov. 1265

[His s. Godred was proclaimed k. by the Manx rebelling against the Scots 1275 but rebellion unsuccessful.]

SCOTTISH RULE

ALEXANDER III K. OF SCOTS 1266 or 67-? 86 [Following the unsuccessful expedition of Hacon K. of Norway to the Western Isles 1263 and his death in the same y., the treaty of Perth was arranged 2 July 1266 between the Scottish and Norwegian ks., by which K. Magnus IV ceded Man and the Sudreys to K. Alexander III; "with this treaty Norwegian dominion over Man and the Isles ceased entirely" Alexander ruled Man through lieutenants or bailiffs, four of whom are named in the Chronicle of Lanercost.]

MARGARET Q. OF SCOTS (the Maid of Norway) ? 1286-? 89 or 90. [Edward I K. of England was in possession of Man before Margaret's death in Sept. 1290]

ENGLISH SUZERAINTY

RICHARD DE BURGH E. of Ulster, 1290. [Richard presumably held it of K. Edward who was possessed of Man by Feb 1290 (Cal. of Patent Rolls, p. 341), 4 June 1290, Edward appointed Walter de Huntrecumbe custodian of the island ibid., p. 359) "which Richard de Burgo E. of Ulster has surrendered into the king's hands"]

JOHN BALLIOL, K. of Scots, 1293-6 held Man of Edward I and on his forfeiture the island was resumed by Edward ANTHONY BEK BISHOP OF DURHAM, received Man from K. Edward before 11 April 1298 (Cal. of Patent Rolls, p. 340) and seems to have held it until his death 20 March 1310.

HENRY DE BEAUMONT 1310 (royal grant of 1 May 1310 revoked later in same y. and the island committed to Gilbert Makaskel and Robert de Leiburn).

PETER GAVESTON 1311.

HENRY DE BEAUMONT restored and again deprived 1312 (Gilbert Makaskel custodian part of the year).

SCOTTISH SUZERAINTY

THOMAS RANDOLF E. OF MORAY Dec. 1313-? (Robert Bruce K. of Scots seems to have controlled Man May 1313-17, granting it Dec. 1313 to Thomas Randolph; the island was in English hands July 1317 but the Scots appear to have recovered it and by treaty of 1328 the English acknowledged the Scottish claim thereto)

ENGLISH SUZERAINTY

[The rulers of Man styled themselves Dominus but in the 14th century claimed the right to be crowned (cf Annales Ricardi Secundi, ed Riley, p. 157). A W. Moore, op cit, II, 974, thinks that the two earls of Salisbury and the earl of Wiltshire enjoyed "absolute ownership, there being apparently no suzerain between 1333 and 1399" This view might appear to be supported by Edward III's quitclaim of 9 Aug 1333 (Cal of Pat Rolls, p. 464) but is inconsistent with the language of royal letters, etc., of the following period (see publications of Manx Soc., vol VII), in particular the writ authorizing the men of the island to treat with the Scots ("pro commodo et salvatione populi nostri in Insula de Man," 1343) and the reference to a petition "ex parte hominum communitatis Insulae de Man ad fidem nostram existencium" (1343).]

WILLIAM MONTAGUE 1ST E. OF SALISBURY, 1333-44. [Edward III having ordered that the island should be seized into his hands gave custody of it to William Montague 8 June and quitclaimed it to the same William 9 Aug. 1333.]

WILLIAM MONTAGUE 2ND E. OF SALISBURY, 1344-93. [In 1393 he sold the lordship to William le Scrope of Bolton afterwards E. of Wiltshire (Ann. Ricardi Secundi, ed Riley, p. 157), but he retained the title Dominus Mannae till his death in 1397 (Dugdale Baronage, p. 648).]

JAMES III 2ND D. OF ATHOLL, 1736-64.

JOHN, 3RD D. OF ATHOLL, 1764-5. [John Murray 3rd D. of Atholl became Lord of Man in the right of his w. Charlotte dau. and only surviving child of James 2nd D. of Atholl. The evils of smuggling led the British government to buy out certain of the duke's rights, the Revesting Act "became law on 10 May, 1765 and by proclamation under the great seal of England dated 21 June the island was taken possession of by the English Crown" (Moore, op. cit., i. 390) ]

ENGLISH OFFICERS OF STATE

The following lists do not exhaust the subject, which requires a separate volume. They illustrate historical development along definite lines from medieval and Tudor times. Hence, while the holders of the offices which resulted at various times from the division of duties performed by the principal secretaries of state are given, the Presidents of the Council and the heads of the Admiralty and of later departments such as the Board of Trade and the Board of Education are not given.

It has not been possible to maintain a uniform system in the records of the dates of appointment, partly because the evidence available is not uniform, partly because consistency has not been observed in previous work of this nature. The best date to take as a basis is that on which the new officer or minister takes the oath of office or receives the seals, and this is the date which the following lists tend to take, but, in the earlier periods, the date of the letters patent of appointment are more accessible and often more reliable. From the later 17th century the taking of the oath is recorded in The London Gazette. The difference in time between the date of the letters patent and the date of taking the oath may vary from a day or two to several weeks.

From an historical point of view consistency is not so important as it might appear to be. Until the later decades of the 18th century an officer might enter upon his duties on a day which does not coincide with the day on which he takes the oath. For example, Robert Cecil is generally said to have held office from 5 July 1596; but he seems to have attended the privy council as secretary on 14 May and the letters of appointment are dated 13 June (F. M. G. Evans, The Principal Secretary of State, pp. 55, 350). Again, to take an instance at random from the 18th century, the earl of Halifax took the oath of office as lord privy seal on 26 February 1770, he received his letters of appointment on 8 March, but his allowances were calculated from 23 February. From about this time the calculation of allowances usually dates from the day on which the oath is taken, and, in the following lists this date is given as a rule, though not invariably, from this period. Detailed annotation would encumber the text and would not assist the purposes of ordinary reference.

CHANCELLORS AND KEEPERS OF THE GREAT SEAL

The title of Chancellor seems to have been first applied in the reign of Edward the Confessor, although the royal writ can be traced back as far as the 9th century. The best account of the history of the chancery to 1400 is to be found in Tout's Chapters in Mediaeval Administrative History, 6 vols. (Manchester, 1920-33). Sir Henry Maxwell-Lyte, Historical Notes on the use of the Great Seal of England (1926), describes the organization of the medieval chancery and contains valuable bibliographical references for its use down to quite modern times. For 11th- and 12th-century chancellors see respectively, Regesta Regum Anglo-Normannorum vol. i, ed. H. W. C. Davis (Oxford, 1913), Introduction, pp. xiii-xv, and Recueil des actes de Henri II concernant la France, ed. L. Delisle (Paris, 1909), Introduction, pp. 88-113. There are a number of articles on the medieval chancery, including F. M. Powicke, "The Chancery during the Minority of Henry III" (E.H.R., xxiii, pp. 220-35); A. E. Stamp, "Some Notes on the Court and Chancery of Henry III" (Historical Essays in honour of James Tait, Manchester, 1933); L. B. Dibben, "Chancellor and Keeper of the Seal under Henry III" (E.H.R., xxvii, pp. 39-51); and T. F. Tout, "The Household of Chancery and its Disintegration" (Essays in History presented to R. L. Poole, Oxford, 1927, pp. 46-85). The 2nd edition of Tout's Place of the Reign of Edward II in English History, ed. Hilda Johnstone (Manchester, 1936), and J. Conway Davies, The Baronial Opposition to Edward II (Cambridge, 1918), supply some information about the chancery during the struggles of Edward II's reign, and B. Wilkinson, The Chancery under Edward III (Manchester, 1929) and Studies in the Constitutional History of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries (Manchester, 1937), are both valuable. For the 16th and 17th centuries see A. F. Pollard, "Wolsey and the Great Seal" (Bull. Inst. Hist. Research, vol. vii, 1929, pp. 85-97); Certain observations concerning the office of lord chancellor, attributed to Sir Thomas Egerton (London, 1657); J. Selden, A Brief Discourse touching the office of lord chancellor of England, ed. W. Dugdale (London, 1672); W. Dugdale, Origines juridicales (London, 1680). Lord Campbell's vast work, The lives of the lord chancellors and keepers of the great seal of England . . . till the reign of George IV, 10 vols (London, 1856-7), is "useful but inaccurate". See also J. B. Atlay, The Victorian Chancellors (2 vols, London, 1908), and A. B. Wyon, The Great Seals of England (1887). There is a chronological list of chancellors and keepers of the seal down to 1399 in Tout, Chapters, vi, pp. 1-17, and Cokayne's Complete Peerage, ed. Vicary Gibbs, vol. ii (London, 1912), pp. 615-17 contains a list which is, however, not always accurate. T. D. Hardy, A Catalogue of Lords Chancellors, Keepers of the Great Seal, Masters of the Rolls, and Principal Officers of the High Court of Chancery (London, 1843) is still most important.

For chancery and other records see M. S. Giuseppi, A Guide to the Manuscripts preserved in the Public Record Office (1923-4), the Reports of the last Royal Commission on the Public Records (1910-19), especially the bibliography in vol. i (part ii), pp. 164-8; and V. H. Galbraith, An Introduction to the Use of the Public Records (1934).

KEEPERS OF THE PRIVY SEAL

The office of Keeper of the Privy Seal becomes clear in the reign of Edward II.<sup>1</sup> See Tout, Chapters in Mediaeval Administrative History, especially vol II, pp 282-313, and v, pp 1-160, and his Place of the Reign of Edward II in English History, 2nd ed, revised by Hilda Johnstone (Manchester, 1936). Cf also B. Wilkinson, <sup>1</sup> In the later years of Edward I and frequently in Edward II's reign the controller of the wardrobe had charge of the privy seal, e.g. John Benstead (1295-1305), Robert Cottingham (1305-7), William Melton, Thomas Charlton, but the Ordainers insisted in 1311 upon the appointment of a separate keeper and the two offices seem henceforward to have been regarded as distinct. From the time of Benstead to that of Wykeham, the keepers are frequently described as "secretarius". Thirteen instances have been noted.

The list of keepers has been revised by reference to the manuscript list in the Public Record Office.

Studies in the Constitutional History of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries (Manchester, 1937); and E. Déprez, Études de diplomatie anglaise, 1272-1485, vol. 1 (Paris, 1908). Thomas Hoccleve was a clerk of the privy seal, 1387-1424, and in his poems he has set down some valuable information about the privy seal office and the daily life of the clerks—Hoccleve, The Regement of Princes (Early English Text Soc., 1897). Richard Fox, 1487-1516, appears to have been the first lord privy seal. The importance of the office declined after the appointment of two principal secretaries in 1540, but the dignity of the lord privy seal increased. "In 1798 a single Deputy was doing all the work of the Office" and "his hours were only from ten o'clock until two." In 1884 the office was abolished (Stat. 47 and 48 Vict., c. 30), but the lord keeper was retained and is to-day a member of the cabinet. See Sir Henry Maxwell-Lyte, Historical Notes on the use of the Great Seal of England (1926), especially pp. 21-6, 75-110.

In the list below, reference to a month without a day means that the keeper is found so described in this month. Dates of appointment cannot be traced with any regularity before the reign of Richard II.

<sup>2</sup> Though formally appointed on 27 June, he is styled keeper on 21 April.

TREASURERS (to 1714), FIRST LORDS OF THE TREASURY
 (to 1730), AND CHANCELLORS OF THE EXCHEQUER
 (after 1714)

Information about the Treasurers must be sought in works dealing with the development of the Exchequer, among which the earliest is T. Madox, History of the Exchequer (London, 1712), "an admirably solid foundation on which many subsequent scholars have built, and [which] still fully retains its value" On the origins of the exchequer see Tout, Chapters in Mediaeval Administrative History (Manchester, 1920-33), especially vol 1, pp. 74-88, and J. H. Round, The Commune of London (Westminster, 1899), chap. iv, "The Origin of the Exchequer" The celebrated Dialogus de Scaccario written by Richard Fitz Neal, the Treasurer (best edition by A. Hughes, C. G. Crump and C. Johnson, Oxford, 1902), describes the working of the exchequer in the 12th century. F. Liebermann, Einführung in den Dialogus de Scaccario (Göttingen, 1875), is still valuable, but superseded by R. L. Poole, The Exchequer in the Twelfth Century (Oxford, 1912), and H. G. Richardson, "Richard Fitz Neal and the Dialogus de Scaccario," E.H.R., xliii, pp 161-71, 321-40. Other modern works relating to the exchequer include H. Hall, Antiquities and Curiosities of the Exchequer (London, 1891; reprinted 1898); F. Palgrave, The Antient Kalendars and Inventories of the Treasury of His Majesty's Exchequer, together with other Documents illustrating the History of that Repository, 3 vols. (Rec. Comm., 1836); S. Dowell, A History of Taxation and Taxes in England from the Earliest Times to the Present Day, 4 vols (London, 2nd ed., 1888); W. A. Morris, The Medieval English Sheriff to 1300 (Manchester, 1927); T. F. Tout, The Place of the Reign of Edward II in English History, 2nd edition by Hilda Johnstone (Manchester, 1936). For the 16th century, see F. C. Dietz, The Exchequer in Elizabeth's Reign (Smith College Studies in History, vol. viii, 1923), and English Public Finance, 1558-1641 (London, 1932), which contains a list of treasurers from 1550 to 1641. See also Sir Thomas L. Heath, The Treasury (London, 1927). T. Fanshawe, The Practice of the Exchequer Court with its Severall Offices and Officers (London, 1658), was probably written about 1600. There is a list of treasurers down to the year 1399 in Tout, Chapters, vi, pp 17-24, and from 1371 onwards in Cokayne, Complete Peerage, ed. Vicary Gibbs, vol. II (London, 1912), pp 618-20. In the 15th century the titles treasurer of the exchequer and treasurer of England were used indiscriminately, a practice which sometimes caused difficulty (see Cal Pat Rolls, 1467-77, p. 177). Although the thesaurarius or thesaurarius domini regis was occasionally described as dominus thesaurarius from early times (e.g. Curia Regis Rolls, viii, 87, in year 1219), the titles, lord treasurer and lord high treasurer, came into common use in the 16th century (cf. Act of 27 Henry VIII, c. 11). They were used continuously from 1612, when the office was first put in commission. Important changes in the nature of the office began with the Restoration, and the commissioners appointed in 1667 controlled a treasury system which was distinct both from the privy council on the one hand and from the exchequer on the other. (See Doris M. Gill in the E.H.R., xlv, 1931, 600-22, and for treasury practice the treatises by W. A. Shaw, prefixed to successive volumes of the P.R.O.'s Calendar of Treasury Books and Papers, 1729-45 and Calendar of Treasury Books, 1660-1703 (1897-1936, in progress). In the 17th century, when the office of lord high treasurer was in commission, the first commissioner was not necessarily the most important member of the board in actual practice. From November 1690 until the formation of the Goderich ministry in September 1827 the first commissioner, if a member of the Commons, was also always chancellor of the exchequer and, in effect, finance minister, if the First Lord was a member of the Upper House, the office of chancellor of the exchequer was always held by a member of the Commons. The relations between the chancellor and the first commissioner during these periods are as yet obscure, but it would seem that the chancellorship did not begin to attain its present importance until after the death of Canning. On the ancient office of chancellor of the exchequer the authorities noted above should be consulted Two patents were issued on his appointment,

(a) as chancellor of the exchequer, (b) as under-treasurer.<sup>1</sup>

Since the resignation of the duke of Shrewsbury in Oct 1714 the office of treasurer has always been in commission. From 1730 the list of prime ministers is also the list of first lords of the treasury, except that during the first and part of the second and third Salisbury ministries the prime minister was foreign secretary; during the last part of his third ministry Salisbury was lord privy seal. Ramsay Macdonald was both first lord and foreign secretary during his first ministry.

PRINCIPAL SECRETARIES OF STATE (from 1540)

The standard work on the principal secretary is F. M. G. Evans, The Principal Secretary of State (Manchester 1923), described as a "Survey of the Office from 1558 to 1680". On the early history of the royal secretary see Tout, Chapters in Mediaeval Administrative History, vol. vi, 397. L. B. Dikken, "Secretaries in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries," E.H.R., vol. xxv, 430-44; F. S. Thomas, Notes of Materials for a History of the Public Departments (London, 1846), and J. Otway-Ruthven, The King's Secretary and the Signet Office in the 15th Century (Cambridge, 1939), the last-named work contains lists of the King's secretaries 1377 to 1485. In 1540, Thomas Wriothesley and Ralph Sadler became the first two principal secretaries; they were knighted on their appointment. Wriothesley compiled a chronicle which was published by the Camden Society (N S, vols xi, xx, 1875, 1877). Conyers Read's biography, Mr. Secretary Walsingham and the policy of Queen Elizabeth, 3 vols (Oxford, 1925), is important; vol. i, appendix, pp. 423-43 prints "A Treatise of the Office of a counsellor and Principall Secretarie to her Majestie," composed in 1592 for Sir Edward Wotton. Between 1662 and 1668 the secretariat was divided, though not officially until 1689, with northern and southern departments. For the history of the secretariat in the 18th century, see an important work by M. A. Thomson, The Secretaries of State, 1681-1782 (Oxford, 1932). In 1782 the southern department became the Home Office, and the northern department was converted into the Foreign Office. There are lists of principal secretaries in Evans, Principal Secretary, pp. 349-51. See also the historical material in the annual Foreign Office List, and Thomson, Secretaries of State, pp. 180-5.

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES

In 1768 a "Secretary of State for the American Colonies" was appointed, but in 1782 this office was abolished by an Act introduced by Burke. From 1782 to 1801, after the loss of the American colonies, colonial policy was under the control of the Home Secretary, then from 1801 to 1854 under the secretary of state for War and the Colonies. For these and later developments see A. H. Basye, "The Secretary of State for the Colonies, 1768-82," American Historical Review, xxviii (1923), pp. 13 sqq.; H. T. Manning, British Colonial Government after the American Revolution, 1782-1820 (Yale Hist. Pubns, Misc. 26: New Haven and London, 1933); Sir George Y. Fiddes, The Dominions and Colonial Offices (London, 1926), and H. L. Hall, The Colonial Office, a History (London, 1937).

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR THE DOMINIONS

Under the second administration of Mr. Baldwin, a differentiation appears between the secretaryship of state for the Colonies and the Dominions in that Mr. Amery was secretary of state for Colonial Affairs and for Dominion Affairs. In the next ministry, Lord Passfield was likewise secretary of state for Colonial Affairs and for Dominion Affairs, but on 13 June 1930, Mr. James Henry Thomas was sworn as secretary of state for Dominion Affairs only, Lord Passfield remaining secretary of state for Colonial Affairs. On the formation of the National Government in August 1931, Mr. Thomas took control of both departments until in November of that year they were once more separated, and then reunited in November 1938

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR WAR (from 1855)

The office of Secretary at War originated in the reign of Charles II, and in 1801 the first secretary of state for War and the Colonies was appointed in addition<sup>1</sup>. Before the Crimean War the government of military affairs was "a medley of conflicting jurisdictions". In 1855 the secretary of state for War was relieved of his colonial duties, but acted also as Secretary at War from 1855 to 1863 when the latter office was abolished (Stat 26 and 27 Vict, cap 12). ## SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR AIR

The first sign of a secretary of state for Air is to be found in the appointment in January 1918 of Lord Rothermere as President of the Air Council and very soon afterwards as secretary of state for the Royal Air Force. In 1919 this secretaryship of state was combined with the secretaryship of state for War, and on 29 March of that year it was announced that the title had been changed to secretary of state for Air. In 1921 an independent secretaryship of state was created.

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR INDIA

At the end of the Indian Mutiny an "Act for the better Government of India" was passed by Parliament, 2 Aug 1858, transferring control of India from the East India Company to the Crown. This measure regulated the government of India from London until the Government of India Act, 1919. A secretary of state for India was henceforth assisted by a Council of India of fifteen members. Lord Stanley, who piloted the act of 1858 through the House of Commons, was appointed first secretary of state for India in September 1858. The Act is printed in Stat. 21 and 22 Vict., cap. 106 (pp. 386-98); for its parliamentary history see W. F. Monypenny and G. E. Buckle, The Life of Benjamin Disraeli, vol. IV (London, 1916), pp. 83-177. Cf. also Sir Courtenay Ilbert, The Government of India (Oxford, 1922); George Nathaniel, Marquess Curzon, British Government in India, 2 vols. PRIME MINISTERS (from 1730)

Long treatises might be written on the origin of the term prime minister and on the question to whom the designation should first be applied. The phrase was in use in the time of Queen Anne, and in the reign of King George II it was applied to Sir Robert Walpole as a term of reproach by a generation which saw in the prime ministers of France, such as Dubois, Orleans, Bourbon and Fleury, subjects who were exercising in their own person all the royal functions. If such was the meaning of the term in the first half of the 18th century, the indignation with which Walpole repudiated the designation is intelligible to a generation which sees in the prime minister only the head of the government, who forms the administration and gives it his name, presides at cabinet meetings, and is the chief link between the Sovereign and his other ministers.

It was only spasmodically in the course of the 18th century that the present meaning of the term was evolved. Before Sir Robert Walpole's ministry, the most prominent members were often to be found in junior posts, such as the secretaryship of state for the Southern department, while less important personages held high office such as first lord of the treasury, and subsequently to Sir Robert's fall, ministries drew their names from statesmen who, for one reason or another, like Devonshire, Newcastle, Rockingham, Chatham and Portland, were eclipsed by their more able or more active colleagues. If, therefore, Sir Robert Walpole, as is generally agreed, is the first minister whose functions and policy in any way approximate to those of the modern premier, it seems not unreasonable to begin the list at the retirement of Townshend, which left Walpole free to lay the foundations of that doctrine of homogeneity which is one of the essentials for the easy working of the cabinet system.

As, according to Sir William Anson, "a man becomes Prime Minister by kissing the King's hands and accepting the commission to form a ministry" the dates given below are those at which the new prime minister kissed hands, but only where ascertainable. It looks as though in the 18th and early 19th centuries, the dating of a commission or the transfer of seals was the moment of taking office, and that it was not till the middle of the 19th century that hands were kissed on the commission being given to form a ministry, as soon as there seemed reasonable prospect of the charge being fulfilled. There is therefore some variation in the policy of determining the dates given below. For the 18th century the date given may be taken to be that on which the minister received the seals of office or the commission was made out. In the reigns of George IV and William IV, the date is generally that of an audience, before the formation of the ministry, at which it may be presumed the new premier kissed hands. Under Queen Victoria it is that at which the prime minister is known to have kissed hands or may be presumed to have done so. Unsuccessful attempts to form ministries, such as that of Lord Granville in 1746, or Sir Robert Peel in 1839 or the summons of the sovereign to ministers who refused to form a ministry as in the case of Lord Hartington in 1880 or Mr. Bonar Law in December 1916, have not been included in this list.

THE OFFICES OF SECRETARY OF STATE FOR IRELAND AND KEEPER OF THE SIGNET OR PRIVY SEAL

The office of secretary of state for Ireland was established in 1560, when John Challoner was appointed to that post. He was also given the custody of the signet, with which he was to seal all warrants of the chief governor of Ireland in the same way as warrants of the Queen were sealed by her secretary. The office of secretary of state was distinct from that of the keeper of the signet, though these two offices were, with one exception, granted on the same letters patent. The keeper of the signet was, at various times, styled keeper of the signet, keeper of the signet and privy seal, keeper of the signet or privy seal, or keeper of the privy seal. The last of these titles has been the one prevalent from the time of the Union till 1922, when the office ceased to exist. But though the keepers had different titles at various times, they appear to have had only one seal. In the 18th century the office of secretary of state for Ireland became a sinecure, most of his duties being absorbed by the secretary of state for the Home Department in England. When Abbot (afterwards lord Colchester) was selected as speaker of the House of Commons in 1802, he necessarily relinquished the post of secretary of state for Ireland, and, as no further appointment was made, it is clear that the office was abolished. He still, however, remained keeper of the privy seal and continued so till his death in 1829, when, under the Act 57 Geo. III, c. 62 (1817), the office was granted to the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant (See Herbert Wood's paper in the Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, vol. 38, sec. C, No. 4, 1928.)

A NOTE ON THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

The most important general accounts of the history of government in the Channel Islands are the following:

- Laurent Carey. Essai sur les Institutions, Lois et Coutumes de l'Île de Guernesey, Guernsey, 1889 (written before 1769)
 C. Le Quesne. A Constitutional History of Jersey, London, 1856.
 F. B. Tupper. The History of Guernsey and its Bailiwick, second edition, Guernsey, 1876.
 J. Havet. Les Cours royales des Îles Normandes, Paris, 1878 (extrait de la Bibliothèque de l'École des chartes, xxxviii, xxxix, 1877-8)
 G. Dupont. Histoire du Cotentin et de ses Îles, Caen, 1870-85.
 L. Selosse. L'Île de Serk; un état féodal au xx<sup>e</sup> siècle, Lille, 1928.

These works, in so far as they describe the forms of government in the 18th and 19th centuries, are of permanent value; but the researches of these authors into the early history of Channel Island institutions are bound to suffer revision at the hands of later investigators as fresh documents come to light. On this point no general work has yet appeared to supersede them, but a preliminary synthesis of the monographic literature, both on medieval origins and 20th-century developments, is offered in R. Besnier, La Coutume de Normandie: histoire externe, Paris, 1935, pp. 250-70, with a useful bibliography on pp. 250-1. The account of medieval origins given in J. H. Le Patourel: The Medieval Administration of the Channel Islands, 1199-1399, Oxford, 1937, is fuller than any previous attempt to describe them.

Before 1204 the islands were an integral part of the Duchy of Normandy. The archipelago formed a natural unit of local administration, though it is very difficult to say precisely how this local administration was organized. A full discussion of the evidence available, together with the names of such men as are known to have held office in the islands during this period, will be found in T. W. M. de Guérin, "Notes on the Early Constitutional History of the Channel Islands," La Société Guernesiaise, Transactions, viii, 174-91 (1919), reprinted in La Société Jersiaise, Bulletin annuel, ix, 256-71 (1921); G. F. B. de Gruchy, "The Entries relating to Jersey in the Great Rolls of the Exchequer of Normandy of A.D. 1180," ibid., 18-44 (1919); Le Patourel, op. cit., 27-8.

After 1204, when continental Normandy was conquered by the king of France, the islands remained a possession of the English king. The subsequent constitutional relationship between the islands and England may best be described by saying that, as far as the islanders were concerned, the king continued to be simply "the Duke of Normandy." During the Middle Ages the king governed the islands either by delegating his seignory to an official who thereby assumed the title "Lord of the Islands" (Dominus Insularum), or by entrusting the conduct of his affairs there to a responsible official usually called the "warden" (custos). During the 15th century the islands were, as a rule, held in fee by princes of the English royal house who, naturally, performed their duties by deputy: see T. W. M. de Guérin, "Our Hereditary Governors," La Société Guernesiaise, Transactions, vi, 220-6 (1910).

Lists of medieval lords and wardens of the Channel Islands:

J. Havet: Série chronologique des gardiens et seigneurs des Îles Normandes (1198-1461), Paris, 1876 (extrait de la Bibliothèque de l'École des chartes, xxxvii).

H. Maret Godfray, "Notes et additions à 'la Série chronologique des gardiens et seigneurs des Îles Normandes, 1198-1461,'" Société Jersiaise, Bulletin annuel, ii, 30-48 (1890).

These lists are corrected and amplified, for the period 1199 to 1399, in Le Patourel, op. cit., appendix, pp. 121-30.

From the end of the 15th century onwards the king was represented in the islands by two officials, one in the bailiwick of Jersey and one in the bailiwick of Guernsey, which came to include Alderney and Sark. The two governments have since been entirely distinct, and the titles "lord" and "warden" were abandoned in favour of "captain" in the 16th century and "governor" from the 17th century to the present day. In course of time the governors of both islands came to perform their duties more and more by deputy until, by the beginning of the 19th century, the office of governor became purely honorific. No governors have been appointed in Guernsey since 1835, or in Jersey since 1854, and their duties are now performed, as they have been performed for a very long time, by a lieutenant-governor in each island. The two lieutenant-governors are still the king's representatives in their respective islands, but they have delegated or been deprived of many of the wide powers which their predecessors have enjoyed—and often abused—in the past. In the 13th century the warden of the islands was the king's representative in every sense, at the present time the lieutenant-governor is in command of all troops in the island to which he is appointed, but he is the constitutional representative of a constitutional monarch, and, in his dealings with the local legislature, judicature and administration, must conduct himself accordingly.

Lists of governors and lieutenant-governors from the 15th century to the present day:

(1) Governors of Jersey:

E. T. Nicolle: "Liste des Lieut-Gouverneurs et des Députés-Gouverneurs de 1850 à 1900," ibid, v, 27-32 (1902)

(2) Governors of Guernsey:

F. B. Tupper. The History of Guernsey and its Bailiwick, 2nd ed., Guernsey, 1876, 570-4

A list of lieutenant-governors of Guernsey from 1837 to the present day will be found in the "Press" Directory and Almanack, Guernsey, 1938 (published annually), p. 67.

La Société Jersiaise has published lists of other Jersey officials in the Bulletin annuel as follows: bailiffs, iv, 92-116, vii, 121-5, xii, 315-18 (cf. also Almanach des Chroniques de Jersey, Jersey, 1938—published annually—pp. 82-3), procureurs-généraux, iii, 293-6, vii, 47-9; vicomtes, iii, 297-302, vii, 49-51; avocats-généraux, iii, 303-6, vii, 51-2, receivers-general, v, 101-14, vii, 52; greffiers, viii, 206-17; enregistreurs des contrats, etc., viii, 333-41; dénonciateurs, ix, 301-10, jurats, iv, 213-36, 275-93, viii, 342-53, ix, 8-14, advocates, ix, 141-57, 241-6, xiii, 136; deans, ix, 1-7, rectors, vii, 75-98, 127-46, 265-88, 379-98, viii, 5-29, 81-110, 197-205, x, 263-5; constables, v, 315-35, vi, 11-25, 137-55, 247-65, 393-411, vii, 18-34, xiii, 131-5

Lists of the bailiffs, jurats, procureurs-du-roi, contrôles-du-roi, receivers-general and greffiers of Guernsey will be found in the "Press" Directory and Almanack, Guernsey, 1938, pp. 68-73, which is published annually; and reference should also be made to [E. F. Carey and T. W. M. de Guérin]. List of Bailiffs of Guernsey, 1278-1915, Guernsey, 1915, though this pamphlet stands in need of considerable correction and amplification

In general, it may be said that the lists of wardens and governors may together be taken as complete and authentic, though some of the medieval "sub-wardens" have still to be sorted out and dated. The lists of other officials may be relied upon for names and dates after about the year 1500, but not before.

THE SUCCESSION OF BISHOPS

See C Eubel and G van Gulik, Hierarchia Catholica Medii et recentioris aevi [1198-1667] 4 volumes, 1913-35; P. B Gams, Series Episcoporum Ecclesiae Catholicae, 1931.

ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF THE PROVINCES OF CANTERBURY AND YORK

In 1601 Francis Godwin, afterwards bishop of Llandaff (1601) and Hereford (1617) published his book, A Catalogue of the Bishops of England, etc. The best edition of this famous book is that of William Richardson, who adopted Godwin's Latin text De praesulibus Angliae commentarius, 2 vols (1743) But, for the purposes of the present work, the fundamental authorities are John le Neve, Fast. Ecclesiae Anglicanae, ed T Duffus Hardy, 3 vols 1854 (which badly needs a new edition) and William Stubbs, Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum, 2nd ed, 1897 For the pre-Conquest sees, W G Searle, Anglo-Saxon Bishops, Kings and Nobles (1899) has been used The transfer of sees after the Norman Conquest is discussed by H. Bohmer, Kirche und Staat in England und in der Normandie, im XI und XII Jahrhundert (1899), pp 90, 91 This change included the creation of the sees of Chichester, Lincoln and Norwich Apart from the creation of the sees of Ely (1108) and Carlisle (1132), and internal arrangements which produced the sees of Bath and Wells, and Coventry and Lichfield, the Norman distribution of dioceses remained until Henry VIII, acting under powers given by statute 31 Henry VIII (1539), c 9, created the short-lived see of Westminster (1540), and the sees of Bristol, Chester, Gloucester, Peterborough (1541) and Oseney (1542) soon afterwards transferred to Oxford (1545) See for Henry's first plan, the draft Scheme of Bishopricks, with illustrations of the assumption of Church Property, etc (ed H Cole), 1838 By a statute of 1542 the formal inclusion of Man in the province of York established the English diocese of Sodor and Man alongside the old Scottish diocese of the Isles, which, until the middle of the 15th century, had included Man The new diocese of Chester had been assigned to the province of York by an act of the previous year A new period in the history of the Church of England began with the establishment and incorporation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England by the statute 6 & 7 William IV (1836), c 77 Their extensive powers (see F Makower, Constitutional History of the Church of England, Eng trans, 1895, pp 269-72) did not comprise the creation of new sees, but their general control of the secular administration of the Church has undoubtedly facilitated later parliamentary changes in the distribution of dioceses In 1836 Bristol and Gloucester were united and remained united until 1897 The following sees have been created since 1836 in the province of Canterbury St Albans (1877), Truro (1877), Southwark (1895), Birmingham (1902), Chelmsford (1914), St Edmundsbury (1914), Coventry (1918), Guildford (1921), Leicester (1924), Derby (1927), Portsmouth (1927), in the province of York Ripon (1836), Manchester (1848), Liverpool (1880), Newcastle-on-Tyne (1882), Southwell (1884), Wakefield (1888), Sheffield (1909), Bradford (1920), Blackburn (1922) For general reference see also Geoffrey Hill, The English Dioceses (London, 1900)

The fine preface to Stubbs's Registrum makes any account of the sources unnecessary, but a few words should be added on the dates given in the following lists The time has not yet come to attempt a revision of the Anglo-Saxon lists, compiled by Stubbs and Searle This must follow, not precede, a thorough critical review of Anglo-Saxon charters (Cf J Armitage Robinson, The Saxon Bishops of Wells. A Historical Study in the Tenth Century, supplementary paper published by the British Academy, 1918) Hence, with the permission of the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press, we have followed Searle's lists. As episcopal years were dated from consecration, or, when a bishop had been transferred from one see to another, from the date of translation, we have given in one column the date of consecration and, in the next column, with the year of accession, the dates of translation. In the medieval period, the last-named dates were those of the papal bulls of translation. We have excluded cases in which the only dates known seem to be those of bonds entered into at the Apostolic Camera (generally given by Eubel) for though these sometimes concurred with the dates of the bulls of translation, occasionally they do not. It seems to be better to adopt a uniform system. In post-Reformation times the beginning of the episcopate, in cases of translation, should, on the analogy of earlier practice, be reckoned, not from any nomination by the Crown, but from the date of the confirmation of election by the archbishop. After some hesitation, however, we decided not to give these dates, but to be satisfied with the year of accession, as sufficient for most purposes of ready reference. In the last column, dates of resignation and death have been given, so far as they are ascertainable, or the year of translation to another see. The precise date of translation in pre-Reformation times will be found, if known, in the appropriate columns under the see to which the translation was made.

The date of the episcopal year, especially in earlier periods, is of some importance in economic history, notably in connection with the return of temporalities by the Crown after a vacancy. For the return of temporalities involved possible calculations about the disposal or division of the harvest gathered before and after the beginning of the year of accession, which would very rarely, if ever, coincide with the exchequer year. The episcopal rent rolls reckoned, like the exchequer rolls, from Michaelmas to Michaelmas, and, with a few exceptions, "the  $n$ th roll of each bishop has the account ending on the  $n$ th Michaelmas of his episcopate, and beginning on the  $(n - 1)$ th"; hence, "the grain prices in it relate to the harvest garnered at the Michaelmas" from which the roll starts. (See W. H. Beveridge, "The Winchester Rolls and their Dating," in the Economic History Review, II. 93-113, Jan 1929.)

Under the head of suffragan bishops, lists of foreign, Irish and Scottish bishops who are known to have acted in England in the medieval period have been given, and references have been collected to bishops of suffragan sees in the sixteenth century, but limits of space have compelled us to exclude the numerous modern suffragan bishops, appointed to titular English sees. These may be found in Crockford's Clerical Directory.

<sup>1</sup> In 1090 John, bp of Wells, transferred the see to Bath. About 1140 Robert, bp of Bath, restored Wells, and a joint system of election was gradually established. (Cf J Armitage Robinson, Somerset Historical Essays, 1921, pp 54-72.) The bishops continued to be styled of Bath only, until the middle of the next century, when the title "Bath and Wells" was adopted. The change can be seen, e.g. in the Close Rolls 1247-51.

<sup>1</sup> Eubel (ii 151) inserts at this point a Thomas Halse as bishop of Exeter. This is a mistake for John Halse or Hales, archdeacon of Norwich, promoted by the pope in Oct 1455. Halse resigned in favour of Neville whose letters of promotion are dated 4 Feb 1456 (Cal Papal Letters, xi 30). From 1456 to 1458 Neville was bp elect. In 1459 Halse was consecrated bishop of Coventry and Lichfield (see Lichfield).

<sup>1</sup> In 1102 Robert de Limesey, bp of Lichfield, moved his see to Coventry. Succeeding bishops are usually described as bishops of Coventry until the settlement between the two churches in 1228, but from this time Coventry and Lichfield was the habitual title until the Reformation. Chester was an alternative title used by some 12th-century bishops, and, though not official, was afterwards common in popular use. After the Reformation the title was Lichfield and Coventry until early in the Victorian era. See Chester and Coventry for the sees separated in 1541 and 1918.

SODOR AND MAN

For the diocese of the Isles (Sudreys) see the Scottish lists, below, pp 226–229. Although an English succession began in 1425, the English bishops of Man prior to 1546 have been included in the Scottish lists. This list begins with the first bishop appointed after Man had been included by act of parliament in the province of York (1542).

Siegfried, a Norwegian bishop of the time of Edgar.
Sward, abbot of Abingdon, coadjutor to archbishop Eadsige 1044. Suffragan for Canterbury. † 23 Oct. 1048.
Ralph, a Norwegian bishop, abbot of Abingdon 1050-2.
Osmund, possibly lived at Ely and was buried there between 1066 and 1076.
Christiern, came to England with Sweyn, 1070

BISHOPS IN PARTIBUS AS SUFFRAGANS

The titles of these bishops have usually been given adjectively, as the papal officials gave them. Only indisputable identifications of sees have been given. Their identity was probably obscure to the papal officials themselves, and many doubtful identifications have appeared in print. (See, for further details, Stubbs and Eubel, and especially A Hamilton Thompson in Yorkshire Archaeological Journal, xxiv, 248 seqq) The dates in parentheses denote the episcopal period

BANGOR

Few names of Celtic bishops of the church of Bangor have survived, but the death of Deiniol, the traditional founder of the church, is recorded in Ann Camb under the year A D 584 Elfod [Elbodugus], probably in the capacity of "bishop," was instrumental in introducing the Roman system of dating Easter into Bangor in 768 (Ann Camb, s a 768); he is described by Nennius as "the most saintly of bishops" At the time of his death in 809, he is described as "archiepiscopus Guenedote regione" (Ann Camb, s a 768 and 809) [The consecration of a certain Elfod as "bishop of St David's" in 994 by Ælfric, 990-1005, is recorded by R. de Diceto in Op. Hist, i. 158, but this may be due to confusion with the previous named ]

ST ASAPH

Little that is authentic is known of the see before its revival by the consecration of the first Norman bishop, and among the few names associated with the church during the pre-Norman period are those of its reputed founder Kentigern and Asaph his disciple Kentigern, consecrated c AD 540, is said to have come to Llanelwy where Asaph succeeded him c 560. The date of Asaph's death is given as 1 May 596. At a later date, a bishop Renchidus is mentioned in conjunction with Elfod, bishop of Bangor [d. 768-809], in a MS of Nennius. It is thought from this reference that he belonged to St Asaph.

The chapter of St David's, in a statement to pope Eugenius, claimed that a certain Melanus was consecrated bishop of St Asaph by Bleiddud, bishop of St David's, who died 1071 (Giraldus Cambrensis, De Invectionibus, II. 6).

BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND

[BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE —Dowden's Bishops of Scotland, which supplements and corrects Keith's Catalogue, was edited (1912) by Macland Thomson. Some additional facts come from later volumes of the Calendar of Papal Registers, and Cameron's Apostolic Camera and Scottish Benefices 1418-88, besides charters and other evidence discovered since Dowden wrote. For the succession in Orkney and Sodor there are Kolsrud's full notes in Diplomatarium Norvegicum, xviii (1913). Under Sodor a few certain corrections have been made here on Dowden, Kolsrud, and Stubbs, but much remains controversial. For the post-Reformation bishops we have the Fasth Ecclesie Scoticanæ (new ed.) VII, and for the Restoration series some useful matter in Hunter's Diocese and Presbytery of Dunkeld (1917). Dowden's Bishops contains particulars of the reformed succession in Aberdeen and Moray.]

Scottish episcopal elections became subject immediately to Roman confirmation in 1192. Papal policy was insistent upon canonical election, and the need for vindication of ecclesiastical right earned for the bishop chosen periodically to preside over the Scottish provincial council (1225) the title of conservator privilegiorum. Nevertheless, the crown exerted a strong influence when it chose to do so, as is shown by numerous promotions of clerics in the royal service.

For a century after 1218 the voice of the chapter was as a rule respected at Rome. A few provisions are found prior to John XXII (1316) confirmations still occur under Benedict XII (1335-42). During the remainder of the fourteenth century the crown was weak, and no controversy arose over episcopal provisions. Though James I (1424-37) espoused the cause of the general council, he made no special complaint regarding the treatment of the bishoprics. For a considerable time after his death papalist views prevailed, and it was not until the close of the conciliar period that Roman dictation provoked serious resistance, particularly in the elevation of St Andrews to metropolitan status (1472) without consultation of the crown.

In 1487 Innocent VIII promised to delay provision for eight months after vacancy, so as to give weight to royal supplications. The Scots chose to regard the indulgence as a perpetual privilege, which Leo X (1513-21) was finally compelled to confirm, and in Scotland "nomination" was held to belong to the crown, "provision" to the pope. In 1534-5 Paul III in express terms admitted the jus nominandi.

At the Reformation, accordingly, the crown had full disposition. The ecclesiastical future was uncertain, nor was it until 1571 that a vacancy at St Andrews demanded a decision regarding the destiny of the episcopate. The concordat of Leith (1571-2) left the bishoprics in being, with chapters reformed. The order of appointment was (1) royal nomination, (2) licence to elect, (3) election, followed by request for the royal assent, (4) royal provision, with order for consecration, (5) oath of homage, (6) restitution of temporalities. During the remainder of the century and the controversy with the general assembly of the kirk, promotion, whatever its character and ecclesiastical effect, was in the hands of the crown. The gradual eclipse of the assembly and the restoration of episcopal jurisdiction after 1603 brought into operation a system of appointment such as had been designed at the concordat of Leith. By an Act of Parliament (1617) royal provision under the great seal after election entitled to the spirituality, and another writ under the great seal after consecration restored the temporality. The difference in the Restoration period was that one provisio under the great seal included both spirituality and temporality.

Many of the consecration dates inserted below are conjectural and must be accepted with reserve. All known chronological facts, which are relevant, will be found in the footnotes.

THE ARCHBISHOPRICS OF ST. ANDREWS AND GLASGOW

The consecration of a bishop of St. Andrews in 1165 ab episcopus ejusdem terre marked an important stage in the conflict over the subordination of the Scottish church to York. Independence was recognized in a bull of Celestine III (13 March 1192), confirmed by Innocent III and Honorius III, which specified the Scottish sees. St Andrews, Glasgow, Dunkeld, Dunblane, Brechin, Aberdeen, Moray, Ross, Caithness. The grant commonly attributed to Clement III (13 March 1188) was made by Celestine in 1192 (Sc Hist Rev., xxiii. 171).

Though the bishop of St Andrews had seniority and prestige as episcopus Scotorum, the individual sees remained immediately subject to Rome. In 1225 Honorius III empowered the bishops to celebrate provincial councils without the intervention of a legate; and one of them was chosen from time to time as conservator privilegiorum to summon and preside. This arrangement persisted for two centuries and a half.

St Andrews was raised to metropolitan rank on 17 Aug 1472. A diocese of Argyll had taken shape about 1200. The great schism dissociated Galloway from the province of York, and the process of separation seems to have been completed under James I (ob 1436-7). Orkney also was included in the Scottish province, now that Orkney and Shetland were annexed (20 Feb 1472) to the Scottish crown. Before the schism the see of Sodor and the Isles was, like Orkney, in the province of Nidaros, but in the course of it Man gravitated towards York, and was suffragan by 1433 (C.P.R., viii 463), while the Isles became Scottish. The two lines of succession are fairly clear from about 1424, when the active rule of James I began.

The archbishop of St Andrews became primate of all Scotland and legatus natus on 27 March 1487, with the same legatine rights as Canterbury. An exemption granted to Glasgow (1488) prepared the way for the elevation of that see (9 Jan 1492) to metropolitan rank, with Dunkeld, Dunblane, Galloway and Argyll as suffragans. Dunblane was restored to St Andrews on 28 Jan 1500. Dunkeld was again in the St Andrews province by 1515 under Leo X (1513-21) only Galloway and Argyll are found in the province of Glasgow. Under the re-established provincial arrangement (1610) the bishop of the Isles was a Glasgow suffragan. The new see of Edinburgh (1633) naturally fell to St Andrews, and the occupant, followed by the bishop of Galloway, was to take precedence immediately after the two archbishops.

ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF IRELAND

Sir James Ware was the first to publish a history of the archbishops and bishops of the Irish Church in his Commentarius de Praesulibus Hiberniae (Dublin, 1665), and the extent of his research in the ancient records of the country can be seen in the collections of his manuscripts to be found in the British Museum and the Bodleian Library. Walter Harris, in his edition of the Whole Works of Sir James Ware concerning Ireland (Dublin, 1764), with emendations, included a translation of Ware's Commentary in English, and continued the succession down to 1739. For a century this constituted the standard work for the earlier period of the Church's history. Henry Cotton, in the five volumes, with supplement, of his Fast Ecclesiae Hibernicae (Dublin, 1847 to 1878) brought down the episcopal lists to 1870.

The investigations of Ware and Harris were confined to the original manuscripts, but the 19th century has seen the publication of many of the texts, commencing with Charles O'Connor's Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Veteres (1814-26), followed by John O'Donovan's Annals of the Four Masters (Dublin, 1851), and the Annals of Ulster (Dublin, 1887-1901) edited by W. M. Hennessy and B. MacCarthy, in the Rolls Series. Sir John T. Gilbert's Chartularies of St Mary's (1884) and the Register of St Thomas's Abbey (1889), Hennessy's Chronicon Scotorum (1866) and the Annals of Loch Cé (1871), also J. H. Todd's Wars of the Gaedhills and the Gailli (1867), the Leabhar Breac (in facsimile, 1872-6) and others. The archaeological societies and the Royal Irish Academy have issued texts and monographs on the ancient episcopacy, especially noteworthy being a paper by H. J. Lawlor and R. I. Best on "The Ancient List of the Coarbs of Patrick" (Proc. Royal Irish Academy, xxx, c. 1918-20). For the later Middle Ages the calendars of papal registers and chancery enrolments, the primates' registers, Lawlor's calendar of the Liber Niger and Liber Albus and M. A. Costello's De annals Hiberniae (Dundalk, 1909) are also useful. After the Reformation the main authorities are the diocesan registers, first fruit returns, and the patent rolls prior to 1870. The diocesan registers from 1660 to 1870, with the exception of the Dublin registers and archbishop Boyle's register in the Armagh library, were destroyed, with the Public Record Office of Ireland, in 1922, but they had been consulted for appointments and consecrations before that date.

The most complete bibliography of authorities for the history of the Irish Church before 1170 is J. F. Kenney's Sources for the Early History of Ireland, vol. 1. Ecclesiastical (New York, 1929). For the period since 1170 the bibliography appended to the History of the Church of Ireland, vol. 11, edited by W. Alison Phillips (London, 1933-4) is useful.

Prior to the 12th century there were no territorial dioceses in Ireland. Generally speaking, such episcopal organization as there was developed within the spheres of influence of the great monastic centres. A change began with the independent Norse communities of Dublin, Limerick and Waterford, whose bishops looked to Canterbury, and it was at the instigation of archbishop Lanfranc and the Norse bishop of Dublin that Pope Gregory VII appointed bishop Gilbert of Limerick as papal legate. A decision to divide Ireland into dioceses was made at the Synod of Rath Breasail (1118) which met under Gilbert's presidency. The division into the four provinces of Armagh, Dublin, Cashel and Tuam, under the already well-established primacy of Armagh, was made at the Synod of Kells (1152) (See L. Gougaud, Christianity in Celtic Lands, Eng. trans., 1932, and the authorities there cited). This late development of the diocesan system makes it impossible to confirm the lists of bishops first compiled by Ware from the various Irish annals. No early list has been preserved except for Armagh. On the other hand, Irish scholars attach high value to the statements of the Irish annals. The lists, duly revised, have been given here.

The royal licence to elect was required in dioceses of the Irish Pale after the conquest of Ireland, but it is uncertain how far the kings of England were able to establish this custom outside the Pale. Some information on episcopal elections in the 13th century may be gleaned from M. H. MacInerney's A History of the Irish Dominicans, vol. 1 (Dublin, 1916). Cf. Hist. of the Church of Ireland, referred to above, II, 85-91, 121-6. But a full and scientific study of the organization of the Church in Ireland has never been written. Hence in the following lists only the year of accession and the year of death or translation have been given. The inclusion of other details would necessarily be haphazard and, in any case, would have involved a higher degree of annotation than is desirable in a work of this kind.

In order to maintain uniformity, this method has been retained through later periods. After the Reformation Irish bishops were appointed by the Crown. Since the disestablishment of the Irish Church (1870) they have been appointed, under the constitution of the Church, by the Diocesan Synods, subject to the condition that the person elected must have a two-third's majority of both clergy and laity present and voting. If for this reason the Synod fails to elect, the appointment falls to the House of Bishops. In recent years the appointment to the Archbishopric of Armagh and Primacy of all Ireland has been reserved to the House of Bishops.

To facilitate reference the dioceses have been arranged under each province in alphabetical order. Meath, like London and Winchester in the province of Canterbury, has an established right of precedence, derived presumably from the ancient kingdom, in the province of Armagh. It will be noticed that great geographical changes have been made, especially since the Reformation. The two provinces of Tuam and Cashel have been merged in Armagh and Dublin respectively. Of the ancient dioceses in the province of Armagh, only Armagh, Meath, Derry, Down and Kilmore still survive, all the dioceses in the province of Tuam, except Tuam itself, have been united to other sees, and in the province of Dublin the surviving sees are Dublin and Ossory from the earlier province, and Cashel, Cork, Killaloe and Limerick from the old province of Cashel. The dates of union have been given under each diocese.

A dash placed before a date means that the first-known appearance of the bishop is at this date.

<sup>1</sup> On the death of abp Trench in 1839 the archbishopric was suppressed under the Church Temporalities Act, and the province was merged in that of Armagh. The dioceses of Mayo and Annaghdown in the 16th century and the diocese of Killala in 1834, had been united to that of Tuam. Achonry had been united with Killala in 1622. Clonfert and Kilmacduagh had been already (1834) united with Killaloe and went to the province of Dublin. The remaining diocese, Elphin, was united to Kilmore and Ardagh in 1841.

CATHOLIC ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF IRELAND FROM THE REFORMATION TO THE PRESENT DAY

[In the following lists the date of the papal brief of appointment is given. In a few cases, when this is not obtainable, the date of provision by the papal consistory is given. In the appointment of a bishop the papal practice is to record the name of his predecessor, "per obitum N N". Such an insertion may be taken to mean that the predecessor died in communion with Rome. But, in the troubled times of Henry VIII, Edward VI, and Elizabeth, it does not necessarily mean that such a bishop was loyal to the papacy throughout his entire episcopate.]

<sup>4</sup> O'Heyne, a native of Elphin, held also that see from 1545. He died some time before 1556.

<sup>5</sup> Tyrrey, who had been appointed by Henry VIII in 1536, was absolved from heresy, etc., by cardinal Pole, 27 Nov 1556 (Pole's Registers), and continued bishop until his death in 1557. Mary then ordered the temporalities to be granted to Roger Skiddy, 18 Sept 1557, who was probably never consecrated as a catholic bishop. He was, however, consecrated papal ritu, 30 Oct 1562, and resigned in 1570.

<sup>1</sup> O'Corrin evidently accepted the supremacy of 1536, and Terence O'Brien was appointed by the pope. As Terence died shortly afterwards, Richard Hogan (appointed bishop of Clonmacnoise, 16 June 1539) was appointed on the same day administrator of Killaloe. O'Corrin resigned the see in 1542, and Hogan was succeeded in the administratorship by Dermot O'Brien, a youth of 22 years and a natural son of prince O'Brien. Dermot held the office until the death of O'Corrin in 1554.

<sup>2</sup> Another Terence O'Brien, dean of Kilmacduagh, of "noble and illustrious birth," was appointed by the pope to succeed O'Corrin, and was granted a dispensation in illegitimacy.

<sup>3</sup> Malachy O'Molony was opposed by Maurice O'Brien (son of lord O'Brien), a student in Cambridge who was appointed bishop-elect by Elizabeth, 15 May 1570, until he was of age (See Strype, Life of Parker, ed 1711, App. lxxxvii). On 23 Aug. 1576, he was translated by the pope to Kilmacduagh.

<sup>4</sup> Coyn or Quin was deprived of the temporalities by the royal bishop, William Casey, 9 April 1551. He was, however, restored by queen Mary in 1553.

<sup>5</sup> Lacy was deprived of the temporalities in 1571 when Casey was restored by Elizabeth.

<sup>2</sup> Machray (MacCraigh) was appointed without any reference to Comin. He died or was deposed by Edward VI in 1551.

<sup>3</sup> Walsh received the see from Edward in 1551. In Mary's reign he continued bishop, and was absolved from schism, etc., by cardinal Pole, 23 May 1555 (Pole's Registers, Municipal Library, Douai). He conformed again in Elizabeth's reign, and died in 1578.

<sup>4</sup> Curwin, a Marian bishop, accepted the royal supremacy (30 Aug 1559) and the Elizabethan liturgy. At his own request, he was transferred by Elizabeth to the see of Oxford in 1567.

<sup>4</sup> O'Fihil surrendered the papal bulls to Elizabeth 23 June 1559. His death took place on the Friday before Palm Sunday, 1566 (Shirley, Orig. Letters, 247).

<sup>1</sup> This appointment ignored Henry's appointment of Bodkin (1536) to the see, but O'Frighil was prevented by the Burkes (Clanriccards) from holding it during the reigns of Henry and Edward. Even in Mary's reign the Burkes were still adamant, and O'Frighil resigned the see to the pope. Bodkin, who applied to cardinal Pole for absolution from schism, etc., having been absolved, was appointed only administrator of Tuam until an archbishop should be appointed (Pole's Registers) (see Bodkin under Kilmacduagh).

<sup>3</sup> O'Gallagher was appointed administrator 6 Nov 1545, became bishop in 1548, and was translated to Derry, 1569

<sup>4</sup> He was translated to Down and Connor 23 March 1580. The transference of the O'Gallaghers, Ulstermen, to Ulster sees, was evidently on account of opposition to them in Connacht

<sup>1</sup> Bodkin accepted the supremacy in 1536, and, in that year, was appointed archbishop of Tuam by Henry . He continued to hold both sees, and likewise two other sees, and contended for Mayo . He was supported by the local lords, the Burkes (Clanricards). O'Dea received papal appointment of the diocese in 1542 in opposition to Bodkin, but was unable to hold his see. Bodkin continued to hold his dioceses under Elizabeth as he had accepted her supremacy, but he remained a "strong opponent of heresy" (Pole's Registers) . He died in 1572.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF DUKES, MARQUESSSES, AND EARLS, 1066-1603<sup>1</sup>

The chief sources from which this compilation is taken are the Complete Peerage, the Scots Peerage, the Dictionary of National Biography, and the Close, Patent and Fine Rolls. The two Peerages have of course supplied by far the greater part of the material, and the chief—though not perhaps the only—function of the list is to serve as a reference for those who have not these works at hand. The list is divided into three columns, the first giving the date of birth, the second that of creation or succession to the title, the third that of resignation, forfeiture and death. About the first and third, nothing need be said, except that the days and months, being often taken in the earlier times from lists of obits, monastic annals and the like, deserve only so much confidence as attaches to this kind of evidence, even though the words probably and possibly have not always been added. In the second column, an attempt is made to take into account somewhat complicated details connected with the succession to earldoms when the space is left blank it indicates only that no significant fact can be brought forward and that so far as we know succession took place on the death of the previous holder. The practice in the succession to earldoms during the period covered by the list changed once certainly and probably, though more obscurely, twice. In the thirteenth century and, doubtless, in the twelfth, the heir to an earldom did not succeed to the dignity of earl until he had been ceremoniously girt with the sword of the county. While no doubt, in general, this took place without much delay after he had received possession of his lands, there are cases where the interval was considerable, nor does the investiture ever seem to have preceded the livery. When, as is generally the case, the date of investiture is unknown, it has been thought useful to give, if possible, the date at which the heir obtained his lands. The chief exceptions to the rule that investiture should precede succession to the dignity are the two earls of Pembroke and Essex in Richard I's reign, who are officially known as earls before being girded with the sword of the county, but whatever the reason for this, the words of Hoveden clearly show that their case was exceptional, and that the irregularity did not pass unnoticed. "Eodem die coronationis suae Johannes rex accinxit Willelmum Marescallum gladio comitatus de Striguil, et Gaufridum Filium Petri gladio comitatus de Essex, qui licet antea vocati essent comites, et administrationem suorum comitatum habuissent, tamen non erant accincti gladio comitatus" (vol. iv, p. 90; see also under these titles). The last known case when the heir to an earldom was girded with the sword of the county was in 1272, when Edward I invested Edmund of Almaine with the earldom of Cornwall, though of course the ceremony continued to be performed when new creations were made until the time of James I. After this practice with regard to succession fell into disuse, it is more difficult to determine the exact date at which an heir succeeded to his earldom. In the fourteenth century it seems that the title descended with the lands. Several indications of this could be given, but it is enough to say that in general an heir was not officially styled earl until he was in possession of his inheritance. It is for this reason that it has been thought useful to give the dates at which homage was done, and livery obtained. Nevertheless, it would be possible to point out exceptions to this rule, especially when the heir was closely related to the royal house or in some other position of influence. By the fifteenth century it seems impossible to draw any general conclusion about the date at which the title was assumed, although the idea that the dignity and the lands were inseparable was not yet extinct. In the sixteenth century, this last link with the old conception of an earldom had gone, and the dignity descended to the heir without the interposition either of a ceremony of investiture or of a previous succession to the lands of the earldom.

<sup>1</sup> Thanks are due to Mr L. C. Loyd for many suggestions and corrections, which he most generously supplied, to Mr G. H. White for valuable notes on the earldoms of Oxford and Pembroke, and to Mr W. T. J. Gun whose lists were the foundation of this work.

The holders of a dignity under each title are numbered in a continuous series, new creations being distinguished by figures of heavier type Irish and Scottish titles are distinguished by the letters (I) and (S) following the headings

ARUNDEL, earldom. The history of this earldom is somewhat complicated by the decision in 1433 that the possession of the castle of Arundel carried with it the right to the earldom of Arundel. There is, however, no evidence that it was considered to have done so before this date. The following is a list of the holders of the castle of Arundel who are not known to have been styled earls of Arundel: the dates are those at which they held the castle. (a) John fitz Alan, 27 Nov 1243—d 1267 (before 10 Nov.). (e) John d'Arundel, 1415—d 21 April 1421 Mr. L C Loyd has, further, pointed out that there is no contemporary evidence to justify the inclusion here of the first three names on the list. Ordericus Vitalis (ed Le Prévost, II, 220) knows of no such title, and on a strict reading seems even to exclude it, the first authority to mention Roger of Montgomery as earl of Arundel is Robert of Torigny (William of Jumièges, Gesta Normannorum ducum, ed Marx, p 322), who gives no appearance of being well informed.

4. Humphrey Stafford, gdson of 3, see Hereford, Northampton (note), Stafford	1402	cr 14 Sept 1444 <sup>12</sup>	d 10 July 1460

<sup>1</sup> He obtained possession of his English lands at this date. His claims to the Scottish earldom were never admitted (he being dispossessed by Robert II), but 22 Jan 1334-16 Nov. 1339, he was summ to the English parlt as earl of Buchan

<sup>2</sup> She had inherited one-half of the lands of the earldom of Buchan through her gt uncle, who m Margaret, sister and co-heiress of Alice (above)

<sup>3</sup> He appears to have succeeded to the title on the death of his younger brother.

<sup>5</sup> It is said that at this date the earldom of Buchan was conferred on him, but, so far as is known, he never used the title, and within 10 years it was granted elsewhere

<sup>6</sup> The charter of creation does not exist. He obtained seisin of the lands of the earldom 28 Oct. 1476

<sup>7</sup> A charter having been obtained (22 March 1617) conferring the earldom on whichever of the two lived longer, he continued to be earl after the death of his wife

<sup>8</sup> For this creation there is simply the evidence of Ordericus Vitalis unsupported by any charter. The appearance, however, of his son as earl at an early age and without any special circumstance to explain a creation by Henry I corroborates his statement

<sup>9</sup> He was a minor at his father's death

CAITHNESS, earldom (S). Until 1357, this earldom was held conjointly with the Norwegian one of Orkney, sometimes by a single earl, sometimes by two. After 1379 a distinct earldom of Orkney was in existence. For the complicated and little-known history of these earldoms before 1108, a standard Peerage must be consulted. At this date, Harald, one of the joint holders, slew his partner and ruled the two earldoms together. He d 1206 and the earldoms descended in his family as follows —

CAMBRIDGE, earldom. In the 12th and 13th centuries, this earldom seems (though contemporaries were not always clear on the point) to have been included in the earldom of Huntingdon (there being one sheriff for both counties). This appears by implication in the creation of Aubrey de Vere as earl of Oxford in 1142 (see note to that creation) and in a writ of 23 May 1205 enquiring into the manner in which earl David received the third penny from the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon (Rot Litt Claus 1, 33b).

<sup>1</sup> Although, by the creation of 1337, the dukedom of Cornwall had been conferred on the eldest s of the reigning kg, and although no 10 had succ to the dukedom at birth under the terms of this creation, yet a new creation was apparently thought necessary to avoid confusion, no 11 having been born during his father's exile and in the lifetime of the last holder. The case may be paralleled by the new creation of 1399 (see no 9), which is accounted for by the change of dynasty

<sup>1</sup> At this date she had a grant of £40 10s as her fee of the earldom of Essex, but she does not seem ever to have called herself countess

<sup>2</sup> The restoration of a few months later did not restore him to his honours, hence, though he was again (1559) cr marquess of Northampton, he ceased to be earl of Essex

<sup>3</sup> Mr L C Loyd writes that there is no reliable evidence for the date of William's death, the date (Jan 1096) given in the Complete Peerage is due to a confusion

<sup>5</sup> He was a minor at his death and is not known to have been st count.

[In 1199 kg John gave the earldom of Gloucester to Amaury de Montfort, s. of Mabel, eldest da of no 2, but Isabel (no 3) does not seem to have been deprived, and Geoffrey de Mandeville whom she married after the death (shortly before Nov 1213) of Amaury, assumed the title of earl of Gloucester. On the death of Isabel in 1217, the earldom passed to the son of her other sister and remained in his family. All this happened despite the arrangement (of which we are told by a Tynemouth Chronicle) by which, on Isabel's marriage to John, her other two sisters resigned their claims to the earldom in return for 100 librates of land (See H H E Craster, Hist of Tynemouth Parish in the History of Northumberland , vol VIII, p 120 n)]

<sup>1</sup> He was styled earl only during the lifetime of his wife. In 1290, earl Gilbert, having recently m Joan of Acre as his 2nd wife, surr. his estates to the kg. and received them back in a joint grant to himself and his wife. This accounts for the exclusion of no. 8 until the death of his mother, and for the assumption of the title by her second husband.

<sup>2</sup> Although she succ to the earldom at this date under the terms of the creation, no case of her being styled countess is known until July 1377, nor are either of her husbands, John Segrave (m 1337 or 1338, d 1353) and Walter Mauny (m shortly before 30 May 1354, d Jan. 1372), known as earls

<sup>3</sup> She was cr duchess on same day as no 10 was cr a duke

<sup>4</sup> The grant of the dukedom was annulled by the Parliament which met 6 Oct. 1399 and was not revived until 30 April 1425.

<sup>2</sup> At this date he received the 3rd penny of the county. He is styled earl of Northampton in the official record of his coronation. On 3 April 1374 Thomas of Woodstock (see Buckingham, etc.), being about to marry Eleanor elder dau and coh of 7, received the 3rd penny of the county, but he does not appear during the 11 years when he held this to have been recognized as earl of Northampton. His gdson, Humphrey Stafford (see Buckingham, etc.) is styled earl of Northampton in an indenture of 13 Feb 1444, but he is not otherwise known by this title. Their proceeding with regard to the dukedom of Hereford is somewhat similar.

WALES The title Prince of Wales was conferred on Edward (eldest surv s of Edward I) together with the earldom of Chester, 7 Feb 1301. The title lapsed when he succ to the throne, 8 July 1307. It was again conferred, 12 May 1343, on Edward, the Black Prince, and since then has been regularly conferred with the earldom of Chester.

WARENNE the title, earl Warenne, is used interchangeably with that of earl of Surrey. For these earls, see under the latter title.

<sup>1</sup> He seems never to have been recog as earl. The succession was disturbed by Shane O'Neill, the eldest legitimate son of 1, who had been excluded from the succession by the patent of 1542, and who asserted his right to the earldom.

ENGLISH PARLIAMENTS, 1258-1547

INTRODUCTION

It is, of course, impossible to fix a date for the beginning of an institution of gradual growth like parliament. We may trace its roots in the national assemblies of Anglo-Saxon England, in the meetings on the occasion of the solemn crown-wearings of the Norman kings, in such great councils as those at Clarendon in 1164 and 1166 and at Northampton in 1164 and 1176. The earlier council at Northampton is, indeed, termed "parliament" by a contemporary writer, Guernes de Pont-Sainte-Maxence. But in the 12th century "parliament" was not a word of art, nor can we yet distinguish any regularly organized system of afforced sessions of the king's council for special purposes. Such an organized system probably could not arise until the divisions of the curia regis had themselves become more definitely departmentalized than they were under the Angevin kings.

In the course of the 13th century we can detect developments pointing to a more highly organized system. Early in the century there are afforced sessions of the king's council, meeting with some approach to regularity, which constitute a court set above the king's other central courts. In them we may perceive the nascent parliament, although these sessions seem most often to have been termed "colloquia." "Parliament" is employed in official documents to describe them, however, at least as early as 1242 and, though the word was not used regularly and consistently for some time, certainly by 1258 it had received a technical meaning. At the Oxford parliament in that year directions were given for both frequent and regular meetings and the composition of the council on such occasions was regulated.

We are, therefore, on safe ground in beginning our list of parliaments in 1258. Thereafter the record evidence is sufficient to enable a table to be constructed which, despite some gaps and uncertainties, can yet be regarded as approximately complete. It is desirable to make it plain that, until the reign of Edward III, writs of summons were not regularly sent to the sheriffs requiring the attendance of county and borough representatives at parliament, and that under Henry III and Edward I such representatives were rarely summoned. The position is, perhaps, most clearly expressed by stating that, out of all the parliaments between 1258 and 1300 which find a place in the list below, we have no evidence to show that representatives either of the shires or of the towns attended on more than nine occasions, namely:

Michaelmas, 1258	Easter, 1290
Hilary, 1265	November, 1295
Easter, 1275	November, 1296
Michaelmas, 1275	Michaelmas, 1297
Michaelmas, 1283

The proportion is about one in nine. And although, as will be seen from the explanatory notes, there were a few occasions, other than sessions of parliament, when popular representatives were summoned, the inclusion of such gatherings, even if it were legitimate, would not affect the result; for there were, during this period, many specially full meetings of the council to which the name of parliament is not properly applied and which equally find no place in our list.

After 1300, instead of setting down the parliaments which the commons attended, we find it easier to set down those parliaments for which there is no evidence that the commons were summoned, namely: Midsummer 1302, September 1305, Easter and Michaelmas 1308, July 1309, Candlemas 1310, Hilary 1320 and Michaelmas 1325. Out of thirty-four occasions between 1301 and 1325, the commons were absent on no more than eight. And after 1325, the commons were invariably present.

It should be added that the older view that, in the earlier reigns, there were two kinds of parliament—the one, judicial sessions of the council, and the other, legislative and taxing assemblies which included popular representatives—has not stood the test of modern criticism and has now been generally abandoned. It follows that no distinction of this kind has been made in our list.

In the 14th century there were sessions of the council attended by county and borough representatives, assemblies similar in composition to parliament. These sessions were known to contemporaries as "great councils" and should be so distinguished by historians. Great councils did not exercise the same judicial functions as parliament and they came to be regarded as lacking the same authority as parliament in other respects. The principal meetings of this kind are indicated in the explanatory notes.

It is important, also, to realize that throughout the mediæval period, parliament was gradually evolving until, in the 16th century, it was in many ways unlike what it had been in the 13th. A list, however, confined to dates and places of meeting gives an appearance of unity and homogeneity which may conceal the real facts of history. But even a list gives some indication of great changes it brings out, for example, the contrast between the frequent parliaments of the 13th and 14th centuries and the growing infrequency and lengthening life of the parliaments of the 15th and 16th centuries.

It will be remarked that, in the earlier portion of the list, a precise date is not, as a rule, given for the commencement of parliament: the reason is that, until writs of summons are regularly entered on the Close Roll, our information rarely extends to more than knowledge of the term in which parliament met. To fix the date when a parliamentary session ended is so often impossible that no attempt has been made to supply a column with this information. When it becomes the practice to enroll writs of expenses we have, it is true, a useful guide; but it would be rash to conclude that a mediæval parliament terminated immediately upon the dismissal of the commons. In the latter portion of the list dates of prorogation are, however, mentioned in the explanatory notes. For further information upon these points, the reader is referred to the works mentioned in the bibliographical note.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

C. H. Parry, The Parliaments and Councils of England, chronologically arranged, from the reign of William I to the Revolution of 1688 (London, 1839) was not superseded until recent years. The introduction attempts to give some account, inter alia, of pre-Conquest assemblies. The earlier portions are uncritical, but from the 14th century onwards, this work, which is based wherever possible upon record sources published at the time, may still be found useful.

F. Liebermann, The National Assembly in the Anglo-Saxon Period (Halle a S., 1913) is a valuable conspectus of known facts, although the occasional errors of previous writers are sometimes followed without correction.

No similar compilation exists for the Norman and Angevin period, but the evidence of the chroniclers will be found summarized by Sir James Ramsay in The Foundations of England (London, 1898) and The Angevin Empire (London, 1903). The task of relating royal charters—very infrequently dated—to specific meetings of the king's council is hazardous before the reign of Richard I: reference may be made to H. W. C. Davis, Regesta Regum Anglo-Normannorum 1066-1100 (Oxford, 1913), W. Farrer, An Outline Itinerary of Henry I (Oxford, 1919); R. W. Eyton, Court, Household and Itinerary of Henry II (London, 1878), L. Landon, The Itinerary of Richard I (Pipe Roll Soc., 1935).

No systematic attempt to correlate the evidence of the chroniclers and the records of the chancery, exchequer and central courts has been published for the reign of John and the earlier part of the reign of Henry III. For the period 1258 to 1377 see: H. G. Richardson, "The Origins of Parliament" (Trans. Roy. Hist. Soc., fourth series, xi, 137-83), H. G. Richardson and G. O. Sayles "The Early Records of the English Parliaments," and "The Parliaments of Edward III" (Bulletin Inst. Hist. Research, v, 129-54; vi, 71-88, 129-55, viii, 65-82, ix, 1-18). The Interim Report of the Committee on House of Commons Personnel and Politics 1264-1832 (Cmd 4130, 1932) includes a list based (not always accurately) upon the papers mentioned above and Parry's Parliaments and Councils, supplemented by information regarding the election and attendance of the commons.

References to the principal contributions to the history of parliament in the Middle Ages which have appeared in recent years will be found in part II of "Some Recent Advances in English Constitutional History," by G. Lapsley, in Cambridge Historical Journal

PROVINCIAL AND NATIONAL COUNCILS OF THE CHURCH IN ENGLAND, 602 × 603 TO 1536

Anyone who attempts to compile a list of the English ecclesiastical councils through ten centuries encounters the difficulty of deciding which assemblies shall, and which shall not, be included. To decide by rigid definition is dangerous; for both in theory and in practice the character of these assemblies naturally changes in the course of a thousand years, while the terminology of councils seldom gives a sure clue to their composition or function. Only irregularly and in certain centuries were councils of the canonical type held, at other periods royal influence was brought to bear upon the Church's assemblies in various ways. As regards titles, one may note that the word "synod" is used of lay assemblies in the Anglo-Saxon period (Liebermann, Gesetze, II. 676 3) and that "convocation" and "provincial council" are interchangeable terms in the later Middle Ages (Churchill, Canterbury Administration, I 360). We are consequently obliged to take account of assemblies not described as councils, and must not exclude an assembly because it was summoned in response to a royal demand. A council may be convoked by lay authority, the king may preside, other laymen may be present, but these facts do not militate against its ecclesiastical character so long as the sole actors are ecclesiastics.

The following list, therefore, gives councils in which the bishops of England or one of its ecclesiastical provinces, or the bishops and prelates, or the bishops and prelates and clergy deliberated on matters of general ecclesiastical concern. It may be remarked that, even according to this classification, a great many Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Norman councils, formerly regarded as ecclesiastical, have to be omitted because they exhibit common action by clergy and laity. Moreover, almost half of the Anglo-Saxon councils in the list can only be tentatively included; they were concerned with ecclesiastical business, but layfolk may have collaborated in its transaction.

The year 1536 has been chosen as the final date of this list, not because it marks the end of formal meetings of the clergy, but because it marks a turning-point in their constitutional history, after which their freedom to assemble, to deliberate, and to legislate is far more narrowly restricted than before. This change was effected by the parliamentary "Act for the submission of the Clergie to the Kynges Majestie" of 25 Henry VIII, c 19 (1534), consequent upon the remarkable resolution of the convocation of Canterbury on the 15 May 1532. With that statement of royal authority the Church lost the partial independence which it had possessed before this time: never before had the king claimed the exclusive right to summon assemblies of the clergy, although he had often summoned them, nor had royal ratification of ecclesiastical canons been deemed necessary<sup>1</sup>

These councils may usually be classified as "English," or "Canterbury," or "York"; but the political unions and divisions of the Anglo-Saxon period led to the meeting of differently constituted ecclesiastical councils, which call for the use of other terms. In accordance with the usage of the time, the term "South English" is here applied to assemblies of clergy of the kingdoms south of the Humber. When councils were held by legatine authority, the fact has been noted in the final column of the list. In cases in which the ecclesiastical character of the assembly is uncertain, doubt is indicated by an asterisk in the final column. Some councils are only attested by possibly spurious documents, while others are inferred doubtfully from records open to a variety of interpretations, all these councils are marked ? in the final column. Councils of which only the summons are known appear in the list within parentheses. In some of these cases, the certainty that a second council was summoned immediately afterwards offers a strong presumption against the meeting of the first; but a search of the unprinted bishops' registers and other sources would doubtless prove the session of some councils recorded here only by the writs of summons.

It has not generally been possible to give the date of every session of a council, when it was continued or prorogued; the extreme dates for which we have record of sessions are given thus 8 Feb.—7 March. In some cases, when a council was prorogued beyond the end of a year, sessions in subsequent years are marked with the letter P in the final column. Doubtful dates and places of meeting are marked ? in the appropriate column. Dates given thus 8 Feb × 7 March signify the period within which a council of uncertain date is known to have been held.

References have been given as briefly as possible, and are simply intended to give evidence of the other data provided in the list. Where possible, Wilkins's Concilia or Haddan and Stubbs's Councils is quoted, though every effort has been made to investigate their authorities<sup>2</sup>. Where these books are inaccurate or insufficient, reference is made to the bishops' registers and other sources. References are to the pages of the printed editions. A few chronological difficulties call for reference to modern writers.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Felix Makower, Constitutional History and Constitution of the Church of England (London, 1895), pp. 51 sqq., 365 sqq.; and Sir Lewis Dibdin, in the Report of the Archbishops' Committee on Church and State (London, 1917), pp. 281 sqq.

<sup>2</sup> It should be noticed that Wilkins (like Wake and Gibson) normally follows his source in stating dates according to the Old Style, and this practice sometimes leads him into error. All year-dates have been altered to the New Style for the present list.

In the 18th century both William Wake (The State of the Church, 1701) and Edmund Gibson (Synodus Anglicana, 1702) compiled useful lists of councils, drawing mainly upon the bishops' registers so far as they go, these lists are generally accurate. This is not true of the more recent works of J. W. Joyce (England's Sacred Synods, 1855) and of G. W. Kitchin (The Records of the Northern Convocation, 1907), which are so often inaccurate as to be of very little use. The list of councils (1222-1399) contained in Dr. D. B. Weske's Convocation of the Clergy (1937) was unfortunately not published before the present work was in proof; but Dr. Weske kindly lent her full list of councils held before 1226, for comparison with the present list.

Lists of meetings of the convocations after the year 1536 will be found in the works of Wake (to 1678) and Wilkins and Joyce (to 1717). For the later period, readers are referred to the sources named by Makower (Constit. Hist., p. 352 n), and to subsequent issues of The Chronicle of Convocation . . . of Canterbury (London, S.P.C.K.) and of The York Journal of Convocation (York, W. H. Smith, London, Simpkin, Marshall).

<sup>1</sup> This council and the next three were apparently summoned by the legate and composed of ecclesiastics, but were concerned with political business.

<sup>2</sup> Records of the meeting all give a date one week later than the day of summons (11 May), as contained in the letter of the bishop of London to the bishop of Salisbury (Migne, Patrol Lat, CXC, 933).

RECKONINGS OF TIME AND THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR<sup>1</sup>

THE JULIAN CALENDAR: OLD STYLE

Throughout the Middle Ages, and in some countries for much longer, the calendar in use was that known as the Julian, because it was originally introduced by Julius Caesar in 45 B C. This way of reckoning is now known as the Old Style, in contradistinction to the New Style, that is to say reckoning by the Gregorian calendar, introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582.

The Julian calendar set up a common year, consisting of 365 days, while every fourth year was to contain an extra day, the sixth calends of March (24 February) being doubled, and the year therefore being described as annus bissextilis. This latter device was intended to rectify, at regular intervals, the accumulated discrepancy between the calendar year of 365 days, and the solar year, calculated by the astronomers as  $365\frac{1}{4}$  days. The mistake was made, however, of counting in the current year when deciding which was "every fourth year," and in practice the bissextile years occurred in what we should call every third year. Thus an error rapidly accumulated, until the emperor Augustus got rid of it by ordaining that twelve successive years should consist of 365 days only. The next bissextile or leap-year was A D 4, and thereafter, as long as the Old Style lasted, every fourth year, in the modern sense, was a leap-year.

Julius Caesar's year consisted of twelve months, beginning at January, alternately of 31 and 30 days except in the case of February, which had 29 days in a common and 30 in a bissextile year. He changed to July the name of Quintilis, the month following June, in memory of himself, but retained the old numerical names for the months from Sextilis onwards, which showed the order of their succession as reckoned by former Roman custom from March. Augustus, however, re-named Sextilis in his own honour, and lengthened it to 31 days, stealing a day from February for the purpose, so that February assumed its present shape of 28 days in common years and 29 in leap-years. As this lengthening of August upset the Julian alternation of 31 and 30 from January onwards, and would have given three months in succession of 31 days, the order of alternation in the last four months was changed to September 30, October 31, November 30, December 31. Thus, here, as so often in chronological connections, what seems an unexpected exception to a rule, and leads to the invention of rhymes as an aid to memory, owes its origin to a strictly human and personal motive.

<sup>1</sup> See the valuable brief sketch by R. L. Poole, Medieval reckonings of Time (Helps for Students of History, no 3; S.P.C.K., 1921), and bibliography there given, p. 8; also his papers reprinted as Studies in Chronology and History (1934), especially pp. 1-27 on "The beginning of the year in the Middle Ages."

THE YEAR OF GRACE AND ITS BEGINNING

The historical year, the year now used by historians, begins on 1 January. It thus corresponds with modern chronological practice, and also with the Roman civil year as fixed by the Julian calendar, which continued in general use till the seventh century A.D. It does not, however, correspond with various medieval usages in beginning the year, and it is essential for the student of documents dated in accordance with these customs to be familiar with their nature, the date of their introduction, and their derivation.

The use for dating purposes of the Christian year, annus domini or, as it was commonly called in England, annus gratie, arose somewhat unexpectedly through the compilation of an Easter Table by the monk Dionysius Exiguus in A.D. 525, to continue the one then in use, of which the cycle would end in 531. Dionysius, a Scythian by birth, but living in Rome and morbis omnino Romanus, constructed a cycle to cover the years 532-626, accompanying it with a list of years calculated, not from the prevailing era of Diocletian, the pagan emperor, but from the Incarnation of Our Lord. A continuator carried on the table to 721. At the synod of Whitby, in 664, Wilfred as part of his advocacy of all things Roman secured the acceptance in England of the Dionysian Easter Table, and with it, of course, came the accompanying list of years. Dionysius himself had had no thought of establishing a new era, but now his device was adopted for chronological purposes by Bede, and even, it is possible, in a few instances before Bede. Starting from England in this way, the new era gradually spread on the Continent until in every country of western Europe, except Spain,<sup>1</sup> Christians reckoned from the year A.D. 1.

At what point of the calendar year, however, should the year of grace begin? For that purpose the Church was unwilling to use 1 January, for though since at least the sixth century the choice of that date as the Feast of the Circumcision had cast a decent veil over its earlier association with heathen merrymaking, it had still a faintly unpleasant aroma.<sup>2</sup> Instead, one or other of three great Christian festivals was used as beginning, namely Christmas, the Annunciation, or Easter.

(a) The Reckoning from Christmas

Bede in his chronological writings took for granted that the year of grace must begin with the Nativity, Christmas Day, but in his

<sup>2</sup> Though, as Dr Poole has pointed out, the Church changed the Golden Number and Sunday Letter on 1 January, and it was everywhere in popular estimation associated with the New Year. Thus Mr Pepys, who reckoned the years of his Diary from 25 March, always made mention of the New Year when he reached 1 January (Poole, Studies in Chron and Hist., p. 3).

Ecclesiastical History, since he was dealing with documents dated by the earlier reckoning from the Indiction of September,<sup>1</sup> started his own year in September also. His chronological theory, however, proved to be more influential than his practice, and the reckoning from Christmas was soon in general vogue. It was used in the Empire till the second quarter of the thirteenth century, by the popes from 962-1098, and even later in ordinary letters as distinct from privilegia, in France and most of western Europe, except Spain, till the twelfth century. The Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings of England used it, and Benedictine writers, with characteristic conservatism, still employed it after it had been given up in most quarters of Plantagenet England.<sup>2</sup> The whole octave of Christmas, of course, was a time of high festival, so that in practice the new beginning on 25 December and the old on 1 January sometimes shaded into each other.

(b) The Reckoning from the Annunciation

Lady Day, the feast of the Annunciation on 25 March, was in a sense a more logical starting-point for years reckoned from the Incarnation than the feast of the Nativity, so long as the Annunciation in question was that of the preceding 25 March. This way of reckoning started at Arles in the late ninth century, spread in Burgundy and northern Italy, was used, though with growing infrequency, in the papal chancery between 1088 and 1145, but remained a local use. It survived at Pisa till 1750, and has therefore been named the calculus Pisanus. It is of little importance to students of English documents, though Dr. Poole found an isolated case of its use in a charter of Richard I. The grant, however, was to Pisan merchants in the Holy Land, so that the occasion was exceptional.

Less logical, but far more convenient, widespread, and important to the English historian, was the use of 25 March after Christmas as the opening of the year. The origin of this practice is obscure, but may perhaps be traced to the influence of the abbey of Fleury, itself under Cluniac influence, and largely responsible for the increased emphasis laid upon devotions to the Virgin Mary in the early eleventh century.<sup>3</sup> In 1030 the style was in use at Fleury, and perhaps a few years earlier at Poitiers, which had connections with Fleury. Thus it long preceded the foundation of Cîteaux (1098), and cannot be due, as has often been suggested, to the Cistercians. The latter, however, gladly adopted the practice, as one more feature among many differentiating them from the earlier Benedictines. From a sense of a different kind of rivalry, Florence preferred the method as opposite to that in vogue at Pisa, and so the new practice came to be called the calculus Florentinus. It spread freely in France, though mainly in ecclesiastical circles, and the papal chancery used it from 1098 onwards in its more solemn documents. In England it came into use in the late twelfth century and continued to 1752. Writers using it sometimes defined their dating as secundum consuetudinem or secundum cursum et computationem ecclesie Anglicane.

<sup>2</sup> This fact has often been overlooked by later historians. Thus, for example, all modern accounts (G. E. C., Dict. Nat. Biog., etc.) ascribe the birth of Edmund of Cornwall, cousin of Edward I., to 1250, because it appears under that year in the account given by Matthew Paris (Hist. Anglorum, iii, 68). It took place on 26 December 1249.

<sup>3</sup> For full discussion see Poole, Studies, pp. 13-17.

(c) The Reckoning from Easter

The mos Gallicanus, which reckoned the year from the movable feast of Easter, was introduced into the French chancery by Philip Augustus. It spread to some regions, such as Holland and Cologne, where there were direct family or trading connections, but it never became uniform for the whole of France, or popular outside court circles. Its disadvantages are obvious, and if, as Dr. Poole has suggested, Philip chose it because he "desired to mark his conquest of the English possessions in France by the use of a style different from those which had been current in them," he could hardly have made a gesture more disconcerting to his own subjects.<sup>1</sup>

THE GREGORIAN CALENDAR · NEW STYLE

For many centuries, therefore, the beginning of the historical or calendar year did not coincide with the beginning of the year of grace, and the year of grace itself began at different dates in different places and at different times. In Germany, at intervals in the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries, the older reckoning from 1 January was temporarily restored, but there was no lasting or widespread change. By and by further inconvenience arose when it was discovered that the calendar year was becoming increasingly divergent from the solar year. The reckoning of the latter at 365½ days was a slight under-estimate, and by the early sixteenth century this annual error had caused, cumulatively, a discrepancy of ten days. It was not, however, till 24 February 1582 that a bull of Pope Gregory XIII ordered the use of a reformed calendar. This met the immediate trouble by cutting out ten days in the year 1582, so that 15 October followed immediately upon 4 October, while future difficulties were to be avoided by making only the fourth of the end-years of successive centuries a leap-year, with occasional exceptions, 2000, 4000, etc., to put right the slight over-correction thus made.<sup>2</sup> The year was to begin on 1 January.

This desirable reform was proposed at an unfortunate date, when religious and political hostilities were so pronounced that even a measure so much to the general benefit was not regarded objectively, as a mere matter of chronological accuracy, and was therefore at the time not accepted by any but states in the Roman obedience. The student of history from 1582 onwards, therefore, is in a worse plight than before, for he has to be sure, as he deals with the documents of Catholic, Orthodox, or Protestant states, whether at the date concerned that state was or was not dating by the Gregorian calendar. Broadly speaking, Catholic states adopted it in the sixteenth century, Protestant states early or late in the eighteenth century, Russia and Greece in the twentieth century. In Great Britain the change was effected by "Chesterfield's Act" (24 George II, c. 23), passed in March 1751, which decreed that the following 1 January should be the first day of 1752, and that 2 September 1752 should be immediately followed by 14 September<sup>1</sup>. It must be remembered, of course, that in every country an interval necessarily followed between the acceptance of the reform and its being put into practice, and that the methods of introduction were not uniform. The dates of adoption in various parts of Europe since the sixteenth century were as follows:

- 1700. Protestant states of Germany and the Netherlands.
- 1739 Protestant cantons of Switzerland
- 1749. Florence and Pisa.
- 1797 Venice
- 1915. Bulgaria
- 1917. Russia.
- 1919 Jugo-Slavia and Rumania.
- 1923. Greece<sup>2</sup>

The adoption of the Gregorian calendar of course affected the month-date, according to the point at which superfluous days were omitted, and also the year-date if the events concerned happened between 1 January and 25 March. Because the adoption had not synchronized in all countries, there came into being, as the late Deputy Keeper of the Public Records has well said,<sup>3</sup> "one of the most dangerous traps for students using original documents," to be avoided only by careful consideration of the origin of any document in use and the habits of its writer. A difference of dating will amount to 10, 11, 12 or 13 days according as the document is written after 1600, 1700, 1800, or 1900. Thus, when William of Orange left Holland, where the New Style was in use, on 11 November 1688, he reached England, where it was not, on 5 November<sup>4</sup>. A correspondent to The Times has recently drawn attention to the fact that 9 November, Lord Mayor's Day, is the only date in the City of London's official programme which does not appear, at first sight, to correspond with some feast of the Church as in earlier times. However, as he points out, this has occurred merely because when the change in the calendar came the Lord Mayor was not robbed of eleven days of office. The election, which used to take place on 28 October, the feast of St Simon and St Jude, was transferred to 8 November, and the oath-taking customary on the morrow of the feast, to 9 November.

Historical writers often indicate the double date, writing the year-date with Old Style first and New Style second, 1688/9 or 1688<sup>s</sup>; and similarly indicating the month-date,  $\frac{28 \text{ October}}{9 \text{ November}}$ .

Now that the New Style has been universally adopted, there is much to be said for avoiding these complications, and stating the historical month-date and year-date (always the second in double indications such as those of which examples have been given).

OTHER YEARS USED IN DATING

(a) Pontifical and Regnal Years

In medieval official documents, a year related to the position and authority of the person from whom the document issued or to whom it related was often used to the exclusion of, or in addition to, the year of Our Lord. Thus a memorandum in the Black Book of the Exchequer recording the accession of Henry VI "in cunis adhuc iacens" dates the beginning of his reign "anno domini M<sup>o</sup>cccc<sup>o</sup>xxii<sup>o</sup> et nativitat<sup>is</sup> sue mense decimo"<sup>1</sup>. A pope or a bishop dated by the appropriate year of his pontificate, a king by that of his reign. Up to and including Henry III the first regnal year of the king began at his coronation. Edward I's reign, however, began four days after his father's death and "before the tomb had even been closed," though he did not return from abroad till two years later. Thereafter it was taken for granted that at the death of one king the next succeeded and his first regnal year began. A list of these regnal years is appended.

(b) Exchequer Years

Parallel with these regnal years, which were used by the royal chancery and wardrobe, there were also in use, in the exchequer, years running from Michaelmas to Michaelmas. The financial year closed at that feast (29 September), and the great annual roll of the exchequer, which came to be called the Pipe roll, contained the accounts of the twelve months preceding. In one case only, that of Henry IV, whose reign began on 30 September, did regnal and exchequer year exactly correspond. In other reigns, the discrepancy often misled the unwary and has resulted in some errors of dating.<sup>2</sup>

For the reigns of Henry II to Edward I inclusive, the historian may guide himself by remembering that the Pipe roll is ascribed to the regnal year in which its closing Michaelmas fell. Thus to use an example often cited<sup>3</sup> because it is so peculiar, the Pipe roll officially described as that of 1 Richard I (because Richard's first regnal year began on 3 September 1189 and the accounts closed on 29 September 1189) actually included in its contents less than a month's business done within Richard's reign, while the rest covered rather more than eleven weeks of Henry II's thirty-fourth regnal year (ending 18 December 1188), the whole of his thirty-fifth regnal year (19 December 1188–6 July 1189), and the interval between his death and Richard's coronation

<sup>2</sup> Moreover, it occasionally produced unexpected dates in Receipt and Memoranda rolls. Mr. Hilary Jenkinson has noted a case where there were ostensibly two Easter terms in the same year.

<sup>3</sup> Poole, Exchequer in the Twelfth Century, pp. 152-3; Richardson, "The Exchequer Year," in Trans. R. Hist. Soc., 4th ser., viii, 171.

In the early fourteenth century, however, this practice was abandoned, and for some time the first Pipe roll and first exchequer year of a reign were begun at the Michaelmas nearest to the king's accession. To put it in another way, the Pipe roll bore the date of the regnal year to which the larger part of its period of account belonged. Though Edward II came to the throne on 8 July 1307, the Pipe roll completed at Michaelmas 1307 was described as the roll of 35 Edward I; the first of Edward II ran from Michaelmas 1307 to Michaelmas 1308. The fact that Edward III came to the throne in January 1327 produced an exactly opposite result, since the greater part of the financial year was still to come. Accordingly, the Pipe roll of Michaelmas 1326 to Michaelmas 1327 was cited as 1 Edward III.

This way of ascertaining the exchequer year corresponding to a regnal year serves the historian until the accession of Richard III, on 26 June 1483. The nearest Michaelmas was in 1483, but Richard's first exchequer year was reckoned as Michaelmas 1482 to Michaelmas 1483.<sup>1</sup> Henry VII came to the throne in August 1485, and the fact that his first exchequer year began at Michaelmas in the same year might be described as a reversion to the practice rudely disturbed by Richard's usurpation. The Pipe roll of Michaelmas 1546 to Michaelmas 1547, however, was described as of 38 Henry VIII, though on 28 January 1547, within four months of its opening date, Edward VI had become king. This, it will be noticed, is an abandonment of the plan adopted in the case of the last king who had succeeded in January, namely Edward III.

Probably most students of history will hesitate, amidst these and other variations of exchequer practice, to rely upon the infallibility of any rule for guidance, and will prefer to orientate themselves by reference to some trustworthy list.<sup>2</sup> It is hoped that the appended list will prove useful. It has been compiled from the (unprinted) official list of Pipe rolls in the Public Record Office, and sets forth for the first time in print a complete series of exchequer years placed side by side with the regnal years for every reign. The list is not prolonged beyond 2 William IV, as the last complete Pipe roll is for that year. By Statute 3 and 4 William IV, c. 99, the sheriff's accounts were removed from the competence of the exchequer and thus "the ancient exchequer may be said to have come to an end."<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> See article by C. Johnson in Encyclop. Brit., 11th ed., and for subsequent financial arrangements, S. E. Spring-Rice, ibid. Cf. also, in 14th ed., article on medieval exchequer by H. Jenkinson and M. H. Mills, and on modern exchequer by R. G. Hawtrey.

THE SPANISH ERA

In Spain, Portugal, and those south-western parts of Gaul which were for a time under the rule of the Visigoths, an era was used which had been taken over by the latter from the Christians in Spain. Its first cycle began not at A.D. 1 but at 38 B.C. It was in use in Catalonia to 1180, in Aragon to 1350, in Valencia to 1358, in Castile to 1382, in Portugal to 1420. The date is always given as Era . . . not Anno . . . and the year starts on 1 January. To find the equivalent year of the Christian Era, 38 must be subtracted.

THE INDICTION

The phrase Indictione quarta, Indictione prima, or the like will often be found added to the Anno domini date of a document, especially if it has been drawn up by a papal or imperial notary. An Indiction is a cycle of fifteen years, reckoned as Indiction 1, 2, and so on up to 15, and then reverting to 1 again. It was computed from A.D. 312, but there were three chief methods of reckoning its opening date.

(a) The Greek or Constantinopolitan Indiction, beginning on 1 September. The Popes used this till 1087, after which practice varied till Alexander III (1159–81).

(b) The Bedan, or Caesarean, or Imperial Indiction, or Indiction of Constantine, beginning on 24 September. It was usual in England, and was adopted by the papacy after Alexander III.

(c) The Roman or Pontifical Indiction, beginning on 25 December, or sometimes on 1 January.

The dating formula simply shows the place which the year occupies in an unspecified cycle of fifteen years. The rule for using it is to subtract 312 from the number of the year of Our Lord and divide by 15. The remainder will correspond with the number of the year in the Indiction and the quotient will be one less than the Indiction.<sup>1</sup>

FRACTIONS OF THE DAY

Early mediæval custom divided the day into two periods, running from sunrise to sunset and from sunset to sunrise respectively. Within each period were twelve hours, the length of which must obviously vary with the season. The hour which formed one-twelfth of the winter night, for example, would be longer than a similar fraction of the summer night. By the fourteenth century, clocks with bells began to be displayed in churches and other buildings, and by this means a system of hours uniform in length came gradually to be generally adopted.<sup>1</sup>

The seven canonical hours for the services of the Church—Matins, Prime, Terce, Sext, None, Vespers and Compline—were till the introduction of hours of the clock necessarily variable with the season.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Hence the established usage of adding "o'clock" to the number of the hour. When Chaucer's parson, c 1386, wanted to say at what time the manciple finished his tale, he wrote

"Four of the clokke it was tho, as I gesse,
For eleven foot, or litel more or lesse,
My shadwe was at thilke tyme"

<sup>2</sup> For a clear and detailed account of the early method of computing time, with its effect on the horarium of a monk in St Benedict's own age, see Cuthbert Butler, Benedictine Monachism (2nd ed.), pp 275-86

<sup>3</sup> Date of coronation. Other possibilities are 14 Oct, battle of Hastings, or 5 Jan, death of Edward the Confessor. We have no records dated by regnal years to guide us till Henry II's reign.

<sup>2</sup> But John's last Pipe roll runs only to Easter 1215, and the earliest of Henry III is for his second Exchequer year, which was to begin on 11 Nov instead of 30 Sept, though closing as usual at Michaelmas. In the interval Exchequer activities were paralysed and some Exchequer rolls in the possession of Louis of France. For details see Turner, "Minority of Henry III" (Trans. R Hist Soc, 2nd series, xviii, 284-5, 288) and Norgate, Minority of Henry III, p. 59 n. 4 and pp 81-3.

EDWARD I<sup>1</sup>

1.	20 Nov	1272—19 Nov	1273	1	Mich	1272—Mich	1273
2.	20 Nov	1273—19 Nov	1274	2.	Mich.	1273—Mich.	1274

<sup>1</sup> The time-honoured belief that Edward I's regnal years began and ended on the same day (20 Nov—20 Nov) must be rejected. The arguments used by Nicolas (Chron Hist, pp. 311–13) are unconvincing. He quotes in support (a) documents dated 20 Nov. 1292 (Foedera, i, 781) "anno . . . regni . . . Edwardi vicesimo finiente et vicesimo primo incipiente", but this is merely a reminder, of a kind often found, that the date comes at the junction of two regnal years, (b) the note in the Red Book of the Exchequer (ii, 1067), viz "data regis Edwardi . . . mutavit singulis annis die sancti Edmundi regis", but exactly the same expression is there used of other reigns in which it is universally recognized that each regnal year ended on the day before the anniversary of its beginning recurred, (c) "various wardrobe accounts." In this last case he was presumably misled by the formula used in the heading of each titulus of a wardrobe book, viz "a festo sancti Edmundi regis et martiris anno regni regis Edwardi incipiente usque ad idem festum anno revoluto." A closer examination of the contents, however, will show many instances of explicit definition of the year as running from 20 Nov to 19 Nov. Cf entries under Vadra, passim, and in the printed Liber quotidianus for 1299-1300 (p. 358) the entry concerning the annual fee paid to the chancellor "a 20 die Novembris anno presenti 28 incipiente usque 19 diem ejusdem mensis anno eodem finiente, per unum annum integrum."

COMMONWEALTH

During the Commonwealth and Protectorate, dating of all documents was anno domini. When Charles II became king on 29 May 1660, he ignored the interval, reckoned from the death of his father on 30 Jan 1649, and thus called the year of his restoration his 12th regnal year (continuing the practice followed during his exile). His first Pipe roll, Mich 1659—Mich 1660, was reckoned as of his 11th exchequer year
